Thunder and Lightning Play Havoc with a Funeral. megular associated press report.)

BALTIMORE (Md.,) Sept. 2.—A funeral procession had just entered the cemetery at Mt. Winans last evening, when a terrific thunderstorm broke. As the lightning was sharpest and the thunder most deafening, one corpse was taken to the burial ground and the

was taken to the burial ground and the other taken back.

The hearse had stopped at an open grave, when there was a flash, followed by a deafening peal, and the driver of the hearse, William Alsup, fell back dead on the top of the vehicle. One of the horses was stunned, but quickly revived, and, with his mate, dashed madly through the cemetery, dragging the hearse along until it collided with a tree. The colored people who made up the funeral became panie-stricken. The horses drawing 'seventeen carriages also became frightened, and a general stampede was narrowly averted by the drivers. The lightning played all about the cemetery, where the mourners and attendants were, striking a grave and shattering the tombstone.

The shrieks of the women rang above the noise of the rain and lightning, and such of the men as retained their wits did what they could to quiet their fears, having all they could do to keep them from rushing out of the carriages into the drenching rain. The burial took place as soon as the storm was over.

THE IRISH SQUABBLE.

Justin McCarthy Issues a Denunciation of the Healyites.

(REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.)

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(By Atlantic Cable.) Justin McCarthy, M. P., leader of the home-rule party, has issued a manifesto denouncing the nomination of a Healyite candidate for Parliament in Kerry in opposition to the McCarthyite candidate, which is causing a sensation in the lobby of the House of Commons. McCarthy says that the course of the Healyites is an act of treason and that the revolt forces the issue, whether it can be maintained or not. The manifesto was issued without consultaion with other members of the home-rule party. It is thought John Dillon and T. P. O'Connor alone were consulted by McCarthy.

The Pall Mail Graette asserts that one of the most restricted members of the Irish home-rule party, who has not been mixed up with any of the party's disoutes, says that it looks like a final praking up of the party.

A Louisville Clothing Firm is Pushed to the Wall.

(REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.) LOUISVILLE (Ky.,) Sept. 2.—Henry I. Wolfe & Co., one of the largest pholesale clothing firms in the South. wholesale clothing firms in the South, filed a deed of assignment in the County Clerk's office today. The firm owes from $200,000 to $250,000, and has assets which they believe will equal, if not exceed, that sum. Attorney

w. Spines.

The firm is composed of Henry H.
Wolfe and Isadore G. Sternberger, brothers-in-law. The assignment is due to threatened suits for $30,000 by two banks, and other suits for smaller amounts by Eastern creditors. The banks which have threatened suit are the Bank of Louisville and the Mechanics' and Traders' Bank of New York. Neither, it seems, knew the chanics' and Traders' Bank of New York. Neither, it seems, knew the other was pressing the firm for a settlement. Both demanded immediate payment of their claims, and but for this the firm could have tided over the smaller obligations. Wolfe stated that enemies of his company in Louisville and the East have contributed to the embarrassment by circulating adverse reports.

Baroness Harden-Hickey.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—The Baroness Harden-Hickey, who is the daughter of Mrs. John H. Flagler, has arrived from Havre. From the steamer the Haroness went direct to the St. Cloud Hotel and later left for Albany. The Baroness was traveling alone, as her husband is now in the West. Baron Harden-Hickey will be remembered as the man who some time ago set up in the king business as James I of Trinidad, the little island, and whose rocky domain now seems to figure in international complications. Neither he nor his queen consort is apparently much disturbed by the march of events, however.

REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—The Herald's correspondent in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, telegraphs that the government has received information of alarming nature from the State of Rio Grande do Sul. The information is to the effect that bands of revolutionists in formidable numbers have refused to fay down their arms. A large body of revolting Brazilians has already declared that it will renew the struggle as the terms of peace recently ratified are entirely unsatisfactory. This body is now encamped in force near Pelotas.

It is reported that the government is considering a proposition to order several sea-going torpedo-boats in Genoa, Italy. These boats, it is proposed, shall be of great speed.

Augustus Thomas's Characteristic Drama Well Received in London. (REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.)

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(By Atlantic Cable.) The Garrick Theater was crowded with a representative audience tonight upon the occasion of the first production in London of "Alabama," by Augustus Thomas. The play was produced under the direction of E. S. Willard, and was well received throughout. Willard received an ovation when he made his first appearance on the stage, and Miss Terry and Jack Mason were received with special favor.

Upon the fall of the curtain there were loud calls for the author, and for a speech, which met with a noisy opposition from a small portion of the gallery. Willard finally advanced to the front of the curtain and said: "The author is 3000 miles away, and is doubtless anxiously awaiting your verdict. What shall I tell, him." This met with loud applause, mingled with a few hisses. There were many Americans present.

The Kniser Pays Especial Attention to the Visitors—Oak Leaves for the Guards—State Dinner at the Royal Castle.

REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT. BERLIN, Sept. 2—(By Atlantic Cable.) At a state dinner in the White Hall of the royal castle, Emperor Wil-liam, in toasting the guards, said:

liam, in toasting the guards, said:

"If today I propose a toast to my guards, I do so with a joyful heart, for it is a day for exceptional rejoicing and brilliancy. A whole people inflamed with enthusiasm provided the frame for the day's review. The reason for their enthusiasm was the remembrance of the personality of the great Emperor, now dead. He who today and yesterday gazed upon the colors bedecked with oak leaves cannot have done so without hearts being stirred with sorrow for the spirit and the tongue which spoke to us in their rustling. These oak leaves cannot have done so without hearts being stired with sorrow for the spirit and the tongue which spoke to us in their rustling. These tattered trophies told of the events twenty-five years since; of the great hour of the great day, when the German empire rose again. Great was the battle, hot the turmoil, and mighty the forces that dashed against each other.
Bravely fought the enemy for his laurels, for his past, and for his Emperor. With the courage of despair, fought the gallant French army. The Germans fought for their land, their hearths and for the future unity.

"Therefore, our feelings are so deeply stirred that every one who has worn or who wears the Emperor's uniform is especially honored by the people. Let your gratitude fiame forth in one united voice to Emperor William I, and let it be our task, especially of the younger among us, to maintain that which the Emperor founded.

"Yet in the noble joy of the celebration a note has been struck which assuredly has no place there. A rabble unworthy to bear the name of German, sourced to revile in German, people, and has dared to and in the dust the person of the universally-honored Emperor, who to us is sacred.

"May the whole people find in themselves strength to repel these monstrous attacks. If they do not I call upon you to resist the treasonable band and to wage a war which will free us from such elements.
"I cannot, however, drink the health of my guards without mentioning him under whom they fought twenty-five years ago. Today the future commander of the Meuse stands before you. For twenty-five years His Majesty, the King of Saxony, has faithfully shared with us in all the joy and all the sorrow which has befallen our house and the country. So also has the King of Wurtemberg, whose highest joy is to have stood in the regiment of Hussars of the Guard, and to have served with Emperor William, and who hastened hither to celebrate this day in comradeship.
"We Germans have only one obligaship.

"We Germans have only one obligation, namely, to retain that which our leaders have conquered for us. I, therefore, include in my toast to the Guards Corps the health of the two notes that the company of the company of the company and the property of the company. Guards Corps the health of the two no-ble princes, and especially of the com-mander of the Army of the Meuse, Hur-rah for His Majesty, the King of Sax-ony! Again and a third time, hurrah!" The toast was drunk with enthusi-asm, and the King of Saxony arose and said:

"in thanking Your Majesty in my own name and on behalf of the kingdom of Wurtemberg for your gracious words, permit me, myself, again today to take over the command of the Guards Corps and in its name empty my glass to its august chief. His Majesty. Emperor William II. Hurrah for His Majesty. Hurrah! hurrah!"

About 7:30 o'clock this evening the whole city was brilliantly illuminated, even to the smallest and most remote corner. The castle was covered with innumerable electric lights, and Ben-whole city was brilliantly filuminated, even to the smallest and most remote corner. The castle was covered with innumerable electric lights, and Bengal fire was burned on the tower of the Rathhaus. Search-lights illuminated the Brandenburg gate and the Frederick the Great memorial. Colored fairy lamps covered all the public buildings and the large business houses.

The grand tattoo began at 7:30 o'clock by all the bands of the guards in the Lustgarten. The generals and officers of the corps were on the terrace of the castle, while the Lustgarten was crowded with thousands of people. Then Emperor William and Empress Augusta, the King of Saxony, the King of Wurtemberg and other royalities and princes listened to the music from the balcony. At its conclusion the national anthem was demanded, and was performed amid cheers by the people. At 9:20 o'clock the King of Saxony bade farewell and embraced Emperor William, after which he departed amid cheers.

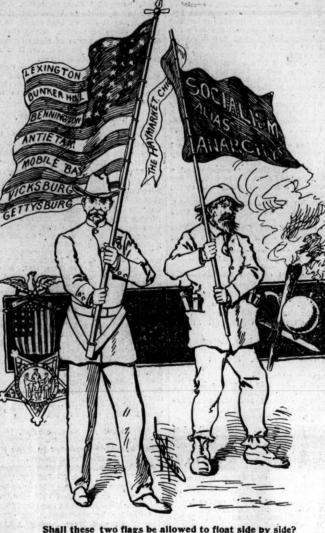

The German-American veterans were drawn up on the Tempelhof field today to be inspected by the Emperor. Their flags were flying as His Majesty saluted and rode down in front of them. He asked each man the place of his nativity, his regiment and the battles in which he took part; how long he had been in America and if he was prospering in business there. The Emperor said that he was gratified that the veterans had not forgotten their old home. Emperor William remained on the ground fifteen minutes.

nad not forgotten their old nome. Emperor William remained on the ground fifteen minutes.

After the parade was finished the King of Wurtemburg rode up and saluted the veterans from America and asked if there was any Wurtemburger among them. Schlencker replied. The King expressed his pleasure at seeing the Americans. A short time afterward, when Emperor William was riding past the veterans, a number of the Berlin committee called for cheers for the Emperor, who, gratified at the exhibition of friendliness, returned his thanks.

Many officers of high rank saluted the Americans and had Schlencker and others presented to them. Several Chicago veterans who had just arrived in Berlin joined in the procession today. The veterans will witness tattoo from the castle terrace this evening.

The Emperor and Empress were entitualartically cheered along the route

THE DAY'S FESTIVITIES.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—Emperor William inaugurated the second day of the festivities in connection with the celebrativities in connection with the celebration of the battle of Sedan by personally decorating with oak leaves four corps standards. The First Regiment of the Guard was drawn up in front of the castle to witness the ceremony.
At $:30 o'clock the Emperor set out for the parade ground to review the German-American veterans. The weather was fine. Large crowds thronged the streets, which were most elaborately decorated with flags and bunting. The Brandenburg Gate was covered with laurel wreaths, hanging from which were streamers of dark-crimson velvet, bearing the inscription in gold letters: "How events have shaped

THOSE SENSITIVE EUROPEANS. LONDON, Sept. 2.-In a leading article published today, the Globe ex-presses the opinion that the German presses the opinion that the German celebrations, endanger the peace of Europe. The tone of the Berlin papers has been offensive, and such as needlessly wounds the feelings of the French people. The Emperor has allowed himself to use language which is at least capable of being misunderstood. While the Globe does not believe that the Emperor desires war, his utterances, it is said, are assuredly not such as to further peace.

A REMARKABLE SCENE.

A REMARKABLE SCENE. LONDON, Sept. 2.-A dispatch from Berlin, which the Times will publish tomorrow, says: "By far the most interesting feature of the parade was the return of the Emperor from the Templehof field of the parade was the return of the Emperor from the Templehof field with the colors. The entire route to the palace was lined with people—every window was occupied and requisitions were even made on the roofs of the houses. It was a veritable triumphal progress for the representative of the empire and of German unity, and the popular enthusiasm was remarkable for its spontaneity. The 40,000 children lining the route sang the national hymn as the Emperor passed. The chief basis of the decorations is the German and Prussian colors, which in every form and size are draped in every conceivable manner, and nearly cover the fronts of the houses at the center of the capital. Away from the beaten track, in the distant and poorer quarters, the difference seemed surprising. Instead of a literal forest of flags a few were displayed at intervals here and there. "It must not, however, be concluded that the people were apathetic. They regard Unter den Linden as the natural place to celebrate the festivities, and they flock thither to show their appreciation. However, many shops were open, and the population scarcely made a complete holiday, though it is impossible to believe that thousands made a holiday from a mere spirit of idleness and curiosity, without desiring to give their actions a deeper meaning."

OTIS SKINNER'S NEW PLAY. CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—(Special Dispatch.) Otis Skinner made a successful production of his new play, "Villon, the Vagabond" at he Grand Operahouse tonight. The theater was packed. The name of the author was kept secret until tonight when Skinner, in reply to a call for a speech, announced that the author was his brother, Charles M.

Skinner. As a play, "Villon, the Vagabond," is extremely interesting and well written and is a most excellent vehicle for Skinner. The scene is laid in Paris in 1461, the last year of the reign of Charles VII, and the first of his son, Louis XI. The story deals with some of the vicis-situdes in the life of Francois Villon, the poet. The author has followed historical facts with some fidelity, but has taken more or less dramatic license in order to strengthen his plot and make the story interesting.

The prologue is bright, terse and crisp and the situations and climaxes are dramatic with the exception of the last act, which is rather weak. In the part of Francois Villon, Otis

Skinner has a role which gives him great scope, which he has utilized to the best possible advantage. The play is handsomely staged and mounted. A YOUNG BUTCHER.

In the adjoining room was found the young doctor with the arteries of both hands cut, and three cuts in the region of the heart, all done with a surgical knife. It is supposed that the mother was murdered on Thursday night, and that the son killed himself on Friday. Mrs. Remington was a sister of Mayor Waters.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—The great deputation appointed by the American Roard of Missions to visit Japan will leave Chicago tomorrow evening for San Francisco, where it will take passage on the steamer Coptic on September 12. It expects to reach its destination on October 1. The commission is composed of Dr. James L. Burton, cne of the secretaries of the board, and William P. Ellison, both of Boston; Rev. A. H. Bradford, D. D., of Montclair, N. J., and Rev. James Gibson-Johnson, D. D., pastor of the New England Congregational Church of this city. Dr. Johnson outlines the purposes of the mission, speaking substantially as follows:

"This deputation has been appointed by the American board, which is the body through which the churches do their foreign missionary work. The success of the work in Japan is shown by the ability of the Japanese churches to manage their own affairs. There has been growing for some time in Japan a national spirit which leads them to become very sensitive to the co-operation of foreigners in the educational affairs. The National University has dismissed many of its foreign professors, and the Japanese are very successfully taking their places. They look upon the presence of foreign teachers and missionaries as an imputation on their ability to manage their own affairs.

"Then, the law of Japan is such that foreigners cannot hold property outside of a few treaty ports. Mission property must, therefore, be held by Japanese. These two considerations complicate the whole missionary problem. While the Japanese are favorable to Christianity, and have no hatred for foreigners, such as is true of the Chinese, they are still unwilling to continue the old co-operation of the missionaries and teachers. They have asked the American board to send out a deputation before whom can be laid the questions which they wish their deputation to consider:

"First—The next adjustment of the creed of the churches to the late scholarship, with a view to maintaining their truth to scripture.

"Second—The future co-operat basis.

"'Fifth—The question whether it is best to increase the missionary force in Japan.

"'Sixth—As to whether it is best to "'Sixth—As to whether it is best to change the methods of missionary work."
"It is believed that the questions the deputation will have to face will be quickly settled when they understand the sentiment of the American

REASONS FOR THE OUTBREAKS. SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 2.-Chester SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 2.—Chester Holcomb, who has just returned from China, after twenty-one years' service in the American Legation at Peking, says that the recent massacre is tracea-ble to the result of the recent Chinese-

Japanese war.

"At the commencement of the recent war between China and Japan." said he, "it was generally feared that the lives of foreigners in China would be in lives of foreigners in China would be in great danger as long as the war lasted. As a matter of fact there was practically no danger as long as the war lasted, and it is only since the hostilities ceased that the danger has commenced. We have had proof of the fact in the recent massacres, and I think I can explain the reason:

"In the first place, the great mass of Chinese are disappointed at the result of the war and are taking revenge on all the foreigners whom they can kill with impunity. In the second place, the killing and pillaging receives great encouragement by reason of the depreda-couragement by reason of the depreda-tions committed by hordes of disbanded tions committed by hordes of disbanded soldiers all over the country. The Chinese government has a peculiar method of disposing of its troops at the close of a war. When the soldiers are no longer needed they are discharged from service at the place where they happen to be at the time.

"The fact that an army may be several hundred or a thousand miles away from home when it is disbanded, and the fact that the soldiers may not possess any means of getting home, does not interest the government in the least. The troops are turned loose and, to use an American expression, they have to 'beat' their way back to the place from whence they came. That they should pillage and commit depredations is therefore only natural to such dations is therefore only natural to such people under such circumstances, and tranquility will not reign in China for people time to come.

"Just before I left Japan I learned that an American missionary who has been laboring near Peking since 1869 had been assaulted and severely cut with a knife. His name is D. Z. Sheffield, and I have known him quite well for years. It is only fair to the other side to say, however, that the assailants were arrested and will be tried for their offense. If such prompt action was taken in the cases of other offenders the wholesale killing of missionaries in China would be speedily stopped. It is almost impossible, however, to mete out justice to offending Chinese in the interior provinces, and the fault is the fault of the government."

what adds interest to Wolffe's un-What adds interest to Wollie's un-dertaking is the fact that his contem-plated journey had been kept a pro-found secret until the very last mo-ment, and even then very few other than certain newspaper people were made aware of the undertaking. Searle ment, and even then very few other than certain newspaper people were made aware of the undertaking. Searle especially has been in total ignorance of the fact of Wolffe's start, and will only be made aware of it, when he reaches a telegraph station somewhere on the road, where the information of his competitor's start has preceded him. Wolffe is very proud of his former achievements, and is bound that no man shall wrest from him his hard-earned laurels if he can help it. Whereas, Searle will be paced all the way through to New York, Wolffe will start unaccompanied, and will depend upon friends along the way to gratuitously come to the front and sid him in the pacing line. He argues that it will be a great feather in his cap if he can reach New York first in this manner, as it will also detract from Searles's performance.

Searles will also have aid from men sent on in advance just before his departure, to look out for his interests. Wolffe started half an hour ahead of Searles, his object being to keep the latter behind him all the way through, and to arrive at the great seaboard town far in advance of his competitor, thus further detracting from the latter's performance. There has been considerable rivairy between these men for months past, and it is safe to say that when Searle is made aware of his rival's appearance in the arena, which he is supposed to monopolize entirely himself, it will spur him to greater efforts, and the public may look to see some wonderful riding.

Wolffe's greatest forte is going without sleep. At the time he put the Chicago-New York mark where it is today he allowed himself only about ten hours' sleep. He is now determined to go with even less. The first rest he will take will be at either Cleveland or Ashtabula, O., a distance of about five hundred miles' from Chicago. When he reaches New York State he will idee to his destination on the east side of the Hudson River, while Searle will take the west side. Wolffe claims to have discovered several advantages on the east side on previ his former record by many hours. Just before starting he partook of a hearty breakfast of soft boiled eggs, mutton chops and toast, washed down with two cups of steaming coffee.

He claims that the Chicago Chronicle,

He claims that the Chicago Chronicle, New York Avertiser and New York World are backing him in his undertak-ing. He is aware that he has a hard job to perform, as Searle is the only man on earth he fears in the long-dis-tance line, but feels sanguine that ev-erything will come out all right for him as the his programme. Should rain not as per his programme. Should rain not interfere, or some unforeseen accident occur the record wil undoubtedly be broken. His wheel is geared at 78 and a fraction.

DALLAS (Tex.,) Sept. 2.—This aftermoon the Dallas Athletic Club tendered Tax Collector Jacoby $500 for a license to pull off the Clarkw-Cavanaugh fight, Collector Jacoby explained that he would very willingly make out the license, but he had no blank, in fact, no blank had ever been printed for that kind of a license.

He then turned to the law, which, in substance, says that if any collector shall give a manuscript or any other species of receipts for taxes except the regular blank furnished by the Comptroller, such collector shall be guilty of misdemeanor, and on conviction fined from $100 to $500, and may be dismissed from office. An action will at once be flied, compelling Jacoby to issue the license according to law. REAL CONDITION OF AFFAIRS CENTRAL AMERICA.

Rioting There is Due to Exeta's Connivances—Work of Internal Improvements Going Forward.

(REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.) CHICAGO, Sept. 2.-John Rice Chan-CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—John Rice Chandler, the correspondent of the Associated Press in Guatemala, arrived direct from the country today, and he was asked to make a full and frank statement of the situation in Central America, now that he is on American soil. Chandler has been in the service of the United States government in Central and South America for several years, and is fully acquainted with the situation and can speak intelligently. He says:

"There is a general belief that Central Americans are at war, or on the eve of a revolution. Recently this belief has apparently been backed up by the telegraphic reports of several journals in the United States. In truth, four out of the five republics are today apparently quiet. The fifth, Salvador, has had some riots recently, due to the connivance of the Ezetas, headed by Gen. Antonic Ezeta, who is now in San Francisco trying to organize a ffilbustering party with American capital in the California city. Nevertheless the party in power, with Gen. Guiterrez at its head, has the good will of the majority of the people, and it may be difficult to oust him. The other republics are doing their best to build up their national credit and keep all turbulent elements in their places. But Guatemala has been without a revolution for some twenty years, and there has been absolute peace during this period, with the exception of a war in 1890 with Salvador, which lasted two months.

"The great staple of this country is "There is a general belief that Cen-been absolute peace during this period, with the exception of a war in 1890 with Salvador, which lasted two months.

"The great staple of this country is coffee. Crops are very large and prices in the last few years have been very high. Exports this year will probably reach some twenty million pounds. This government, under Gen. Barrios, ably seconded by his Minister of War, Gen. Morales, is all for peace. Government buildings are being erected all over the capital. Some, like the National Palace, or government house, will cost upward of $1,000,000. Furthermore, the city is being beautified with parks and well-paved avenues. Three new banks have been started within the last three months, with an aggregate capital of $6,000,000. Business generally is very promising, and, in general, life and property are safe.

"The country has one railroad finished and two in course of construction. The Atlantic line will finally join the capital at the port of Barrios, and then the country will be but four days from the United States, whereas it now takes fifteen days to reach San Francisco by the Pacific Mail line. Most of the trade of Central America goes to San Francisco and New York, but there is no reason why St. Louis, New Orleans and other cities on the Mississippi, also Chicago, Cincinnati and other Western cities that are practically tributaries to the Mississippi River, could not get a very large shere. The country is very rich in minerals as well as in all tropical products, and only needs the energy and capital of Americans to build up a new Eidorado. "One of the vital questions in Central America today is naturally the Monroe doctrine, and the course the American government may pursue in sustaining it. The Central Americans thoroughly believe that no other nation but the United States can and should build the Nicaraguan Canal, and that the $100.000,000 which it may cost would be amply paid for by the obtaining of a majority of South America's commerce, especially that on the Pacific side, the imports and exports h

In the interview the ex-Congressman said:

"The situation is clearing up rapidly, and though the friends of silver have hard fights ahead in some localities, there is nothing apprehensive in the situation in Missouri.

"No, I shall not go to Kentucky," Bland replied to a question. "Senators Vilas and McPherson led the fight against the use of those words, but not on the ground that they were opposed to the use of silver. They declared over and over again that they were just as good bimetallists and just as friendly to silver as Patterson and Daniel. They said their objection to the words 'free coinage' was simply that they had a special meaning in certain parts of the country, and would be misleading. Atkins of Tennessee introduced the compromise resolution that was adopted, after being modified. Patterson and Daniel fought it to the end, and voted against it when it was put to a vote.

As an example, two Mexican grandees of New Mexico claimed to have lost 15,000 sheep, valued at $2 per head, and not only made affidavits to that effect, but had fifteen or twenty of their employees do the same thing. It seemed to be a clear case of loss, but the court objected to paying $2 per head on Mexican sheep. Spearland was accordingly sent to New Mexico by the court to compromise on $1.50 per head, but the Mexicans declined all overtures to arbitrate. As this was Spearland's first case, he was ainxious to make a record, and began an investigation, which resulted in establishing the fact that Mexicans never owned more than 1500 sheep at any one time, and that a few hundred head were actually stolen by Navajo Indians, but at a different time and place than that claimed.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2—For the past twenty-four hours there has been an almost continuous line of letter-carriers arriving in this city. They come from all parts of the country to take part in the parade which was held this afternoon, and the annual convention which opens here tomorrow. It is estimated that there were five thousand men in line this afternoon. Postmaster-General Wilson reached the city at noon under the escort of Postmaster Warfield of Baltimore and the letter-carriers of that city, 275 strong. The Marine Band, which headed the big parade, was a particular feature of the day's exercises.

The parade was formed at 3 o'clock, but it was nearly 4 o'clock when the line of marchers reached the reviewing stand at the American League. Among those on the platform were Postmaster General Wilson. Postmaster Carr of Philadelphia, ex-Gov. Pattiso; Postmaster Dayfon of New York and Washington Hesing of Chicago.

After the parade, lunches were said to the carriers in Industrial Hall, during the course of which the Marine Band played a varied programme. In the evening a banquet given by the Letter-Carriers. National Association was held at the Academy of Music. "Postmaster-General Wilson said:

"Gentlemen of the National Association of Letter-carriers. It is a pleasure to mp to meet the representatives of so many of my fellow-workers in the public service. The Postmöse Department of the United States is today the largest business machine in the world, and is engaged in the daily and strenuous duty of keeping pace with and outstripping wherever possible the bounding growth of our country and its quick adoption of all the forces of modern progress, whether material or social. The story of its growth is to us a story of marvels, and if foretold to the men who founded our government would have been a study of miracles passing human belief."

Referring to the recent inspection of the carrier system in a number of postoffices of the country, Mr. Wilson continued:

"But let me say to you that, if the department recogn can Cable.) The command of Lieut. Col. Zubia surprised the insurgent bands led by Suarez and Zayas in Quermada, near Grandee Remedios, and, after a sharp engagement, routed them. The insurgents left eight of their dead on the field, but carried their wounded with them in their retreat. Of Lieut. Col. Zubia's command three were killed and five wounded. Lubia's command three were killed and five wounded.

A company of Civil Guards encountered 8, mounted band at Maracuaga. At the first fire of the volunteers the insurgents took flight, leaving forty saddle-horses and 2600 cartridges in the hands of the guards.

The column of Gen. Canellas routed the band headed by Maceo to the south of Bamon de las Yaguas on Saturday. The insurgents very much outnumbered the Spaniards, but they were driven from their positions and decamped, leaving thirty-six killed and eighty wounded. The Spanish lost one officer and twelve soldiers killed and nine officers and thirty-nine soldiers wounded. At Hatalla the insurgents burned the store of Refino Diaz, the Dolores mansion and the farmhouse of Joseph Prieto, together with $10,000 worth of plantation property. For each bale of tobacco produced $2 has been demanded of 3500 carriers, only fifty-three cases have been found of such personal delinquency as to require separation from the service, and that in every instance has been done, after full opportunity for hearing as to the delinquencies reported. This is a good showing. To find only fifty-three unworthy to wear the uniform is a proof of high discipline on which you may well congratulate yourselves, and yet fifty-three are enough to cast suspicion on many hundred. I believe that I can say that for all chief officials in the Postoffice Department—I know I can for myself—that white we shall try to keep the standard of duty and character as high as possible and to that end shall not hesitate to use the authority and the responsibility which is ours, we desire to look upon you and on the other employees of the service, not as some of the parts of the machine of our gigantic postal system, but as our fellow-workers and comrades in a great public service, and in what one of my recent predecessors called 'a fascinating branch of that service."

Among the important subjects which will engage the attention of the convention will be the tenure-of-office bill, salary bill, pension bill, and the equalization of horse and carriage hire, There will also be a spirited fight for the convention of 1895 between the Burfalo and the Grand Rapids delegations. required.

Lieut. Gonzales Moro, with 300 troops, has had an engagement with the insurgents near Naronjal, province of Santiago de Cuba, in which four of the latter were killed.

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) Sept. 2.—Fire broke out in the four-story furniture store of L. P. Peck & Co. about 1 o'clock and burned until the entire stock was consumed and the building destroyed. The loss on furniture is between $50,000 and $50,000; on fixtures, $15,000; loss on building, $45,000. The Alamo trunk factory adjoining suffered damage to stock of about $5000. The Texas Millinery Company also suffered heavy damage to stock. The losses are partly covered by insurance.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 2.—(Special Dispatch.) A year ago the Chronicle exposed a clever adventuress and her niece who had succeeded in defrauding the Palace Hotel of several hundred dollars of board. The adventuress at that time was known as Mrs. Murray and her niece as Miss Baldwin. At present the former is occupying a cell in the city prison under the name of Mrs. Lucy Carlysle, and is charged with embezzlement amounting to fel-

On July 6 of last year a middle-aged lady, prematurely gray and with pleas-ant features, arrived at the Palace Hotel with a wagon-load of baggage. She registered from Philadelphia. She was assigned to one of the most expensive suites in the house. In a few days a handsome young woman arrived and the middle-aged lady introduced her as her niece from Philadelphia.

At that time, and for several years previous, Fred O. Stanton had been chief clerk of the hotel. He was much sed by the two ladies. They or dered the best the house afforded, and at the end of the first week there was a comfortable bill to pay. It included the cost of meals served in their apartments as well as the price of real wines. The bill was not paid. The account was made out and formally presented to the fair guests, but they paid the chief clerk with their sweetest smiles, but no cash was forthcoming. Another week passed. The expected remittances, it was said, were delayed by the strike. Clerk Stanton never lost faith in the honesty of the guests and upon his recommendation they were permitted to stay and increase the indebtedness.

At the end of the month not a dol lar had been paid, and the managers lost patience. The guests from Philaof the baggage was retained as se curity. They moved to another hotel, where they began the creation of another indebtedness. They were con-stantly visited by Stanton. In time the manager of the second hotel was varned by the manager of the Palace and the guests were compelled to depart. It was about this time Stanton was asked to resign as clerk. The re-quest was complied with promptly.

Mrs. Murray and her niece remained in the city until last April. During that time Mrs. Murray, or, as she nov called herself, Mrs. Carlysle, purchase $350 worth of jewelry from Louis Pla-mondon, manager of a jewelry store on Market street, making part payment of $65, and promising to settle the bill within a day or two. PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Sept. 2.—Judge Henry W. Fleury, who came to Arizona with the first set of Territorial officers in 1863, died here today of Bright's disease. Judge Fleury was a historical, as well as a peculiar character, having served as Secretary of the Territory, also as Acting Governor during the early history of Arizona.

Since first coming here he had never been outside of the Territory and during inst twenty-seven years had slept but one night away from the house occupied by mine ever since his first arrival and which, was also occupied in early days by the covernor and other Territorial pflicial. About a year ago he was called to any discount mining camp official husiness, as justice of the century that he was absent for even a day from Prescott.

The quaint old loghouse in which he lived so long and in which he died was an object of interest to all visitors to Prescott as, in addition to serving as a gubernatorial mansion and offices for Territorial officials during the early period of Arizona's history, it also served as a sort of fort and place of retreat during the days when Apaches held sway over this section. Judge Fleury came here from Brooklyn, N. Y., where relatives still reside. He was over 80 years old.

It was a dramatization of the silver issue in politics and, judging by the remarkable circumstances attending the first public performance, the plece may not unlikely attract wide-spread attention. "The Silver Lining" is the name of the play. The theme was suggested by "Coin's Financial School," and W. H. Harvey of "Coin" occupied a proscenium box. Hissing of some lines early in the piece, presumably by anti-silver sympathizers, caused no little excitement, which was increased when, after the second act, it was evident that the piece had made a hit.

The play itself proved unexpectedly strong in dramatic interest. It was richly mounted by Manager T. W. Miner, the play being his first personal venture, though he has long been associated with the management of John A. Hearn's "Hearts of Oak" and the theatrical undertakings of his father, Congressman Miner of New York.

The author denied before the curtain that the play was being backed by the silver interests. From Chicago it goes to Milwaukee and then on an extensive tour of the West and South. The company is a particularly competent one, most of the members being picked from the Frohman and other well-known companies. A feature of the plece is the excellent work of William Courtleigh as the hero, John Jefferson, sald to represent Ex-Congressman Bryan of Nebraska.

DULUTH (Minn.,) Sept. 2.—George Fraker of Topeka, Kan., supposed to have been drowned in the Missouri River two years ago, was captured in the woods near Tower, Minn., yesterday. Fraker's life was insured for $58,000. His heirs brought suit in the Kansas court to recover. The case went to the Supreme Court and the insurance companies were defeated in the final decision, rendered last month. It was always maintained by the companies that Fraker was alive.

Recently-it became known in some way that Fraker was near Tower, and was known under the alias of Schnell. Attorney Robert T. Herrick and Deputy Sheriff Wilkinson of Topeka, Kan., organized a party to search for him. Fraker was found in the woods, and the capture effected in a strategic manner. He was brought to Duluth today and will be taken at once to Topeka. Fraker will go without a requisition. He has been living near Tower for six months. He admitted his identity and said he did not leave home on purpose to defraud the companies, but he fell in the Missouri River, swam across the river and got on land. Next day he read in the papers that he had been drowned, and concluded to carry out the deception, and allow his heirs to collect the insurance.

The case is one of great general interest because a reward of $20,000 was offered for Fraker's capture. He is a physician and, up to the latter part of 1893, was physician to the St. Elmo Hotel, the leading hotel in Excelsion Springs, a famous health resort near Kansas City. Together with seven or eight companions the doctor went fishing on the Missouri River one day and after dark and while in company with George Harvey, James Triplett and Jake Crowley, a negro, he disappeared and was seen no more. The parties afterward swore positively that they witnessed his drowning while rowing in a leaky boat, but, after a search his body could not be found. Some three months previous he began loading up with life insurance, taking $10

Fraker, who had practiced medicine for eight years, was an active leader in Sunday-school work, but held rather peculiar views on religious subjects. After a thorough investigation all the companies except the Equitable refused to pay the claims, whereupon James E. Robert Herrick was appointed jointly to conduct the case for the companies and was assisted by eminent legal talent. Wisconsin and seems to be an innocent party.

The prisoner is a well-built man of about 5 ft. 6 in., 40 years old, with a short, black whiskers. In conversation he stated that he had expected his relatives to get a portion of the insurance money and himself some also. He had been greatly benefited by the waters of a spring where he stopped and had made arrangements to buy the place, intending to make it a water-cure resort. He would have spent $20,000, he said, in improving the place. Attorney Herrick and Sheriff Wilkinson left on the afternoon train for St. Paul and will go right through to Kansas City. They did not call upon the county officers here at all and the latter are pretty sore in consequence. Had Fraker refused to accompany them they could have done nothing without the aid of the sheriff of this county.

AN INSURANCE MAN'S BELIEF.
TOPEKA (Kan.,) Sept. 2.—President
John Davis, of the Kansas Mutual Life Association, said tonight there is no possibility but that the man whom the afternoon Associated Press dispatches reported as captured near Tower, Minn., is George W. Fraker. R. T.
Herrick, Davis said, has been working on the clews which finally logated Fraker for fully six months. Last week he was sure that he had found him, and came to Kansas City for an interview with Davis. Last night Davis received a telegram which told the same story that was told by the dispatches today, namely, that Fraker had been caught; that he admitted his identity, and that he was coming to Missouri without a requisition. Hererated this season, from eight hundred to one thousand tons of white grapes being contracted for to be used in manufacturing must for champagne-making purposes. The operation of the must condenser will give work to a number of hands and afford producers a market for white grapes which are unsalable for wine-making purposes.

THE CURRENCY SUPPLY.

Money to Move the Crops is Now in (REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.) WASHINGTON, Sept. 2. — The furnishing of small notes and silver dollars to meet the demand for money to move the crops is likely to absorb the energies of the Treasury Department during the next for weak more than the degles of the Treasury Department during the next few weeks more than the de-gles of the Treasury Department during the next few weeks more than the demand for gold.

The demand is not so active this year as it has sometimes been, and is not expected to be because the national banks are better equipped than usual with small notes, their surplus reserves are larger, and the treasury itself has been making its recent shipments of money in notes for $5 and $10. There is a large supply of both these denominations in the currency reserve vaults of the treasury. The supply of notes for $1 and $2 is not so large, but can be increased if necessary. There is little discrimination in the demands upon the treasury as to the character of the paper currency sent out so long as it is in new bills for small denominations.

The usual policy of the department is to unload silver certificates as far as possible, to follow these by Sherman treasury notes and to retain the old legal-tender notes until the last. The diffusion of small Sherman notes in distant parts of the country prevents their presentation at the sub-treasuries for redemption in gold and the hoarding of the legal tender cuts off in a measure the excess of currency redeemable in gold at New York.

The Notorious Murderer and All-Around Criminal Arrested.

MEGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.1

CINCINNATI. Sept. 2.— Patrick

Crow, alias Murphy and other names, was arrested at the delivery window of the postoffice today, by detectives who were advised that he was in hiding in this city. He is the man who robbed a demi-monde resort in Chicago of jewelry and cash some years ago, ran into the street and shot two policemen and two citizens who pursued him. He is wanted for train-robbery at St. Joseph, Mo., for a diamond robbery in St. Paul, and for various other crimes.

Col. Deitsch, superintendent of police, received three letters about the sametime two weeks ago, saying that Crow was in hiding in this city. One came from St. Paul, where he was wanted for a big diamond robbery; another from St. Joseph, Mo., saying he should be captured by all means for a train-rob-

PERFECT WOMAN,

She was a phantom of delight
When first she gleamed upon my sight;
A lovely apparition, sent
To be a moment's ornament.
Her eyes as stars of twilight fair;
Like twilight, too, her dusky hair,
But all else about her drawn
From Maytime and the cheerful dawn;
A dancing shape, an image gay,
To haunt, to startle and waylay.

I saw her upon nearer view,
A spirit, yet a woman, too;
Her household motions light and free,
And steps of virgin liberty;
A countenance in which did meet
Sweet records, promises as sweet;
A creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food;
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,

OFFICE OF THE TIMES. Los Angeles, Sept. 2, 1895. HOW FRANCE RAISES MONEY. in the Old World, the proof of which is furnished by the astonishing manner in which France recovered from the war with Germany and the immense fine imposed upon her by the victors.

It is not likely that the method of taxation adopted in France will ever become popular in this country.

The principal source of revenue of France is from stamps, stamped paper, the registering of contracts, from which $140,000,000 are realized; from which $140,000,000 are realized; from which $140,000,000 and thes, playing cards, and other liquors, $120,000,000; from tobacco, matches, playing cards, and other articles, the manufacture and sale of which is a government monopoly, $130,000,000; from customs, $100,000,000; from land, $39,600,000; from personal property, $28,600,000.

The American Consul at Bordeaux states that if a clerk occupies a hall bedroom in France he pays the government about $2 a year for enjoying that privilege, while his landlady not only has to pay for her poodle, but for every door and window in the house, and when you learn that the treasury received $12,000,000 a year for windows alone, you may imagine that the architect who can design a house with the least possible amount of ventilation does the best business.

If one owns a horse, carriage; billiard table or bicycle in France he must pay the government a specific tax on the same, and if he fails to do so, his furniture will be seized. The government collects $6,400,000 every year for permitting such luxuries to exist, and a bill was recently introduced in the Chamber of Deputies imposing a tax on corsets.

The sum of $24,000,000 is deposited in the hands of the officials every calendar year for the privilege or license of carrying on business enterprises.

EASTERN PRUDES. In a recent issue the California Fruit Grower argues in favor of changing the name of the navel orange. That journal says:

MONDAY, Sept. 25, 1895.

James D Requa et ux to M J Mc Lachlan, lot 1 and west 26 feet of lot 2, William Freeman's subdivision of south part of lot 12, block I, San Pasqual tract, Pasadena, $5000.

Ann Unruh Rosenthal to F A King, west 5 acres of east 50 acres of SW¼ of sec 19, T 2 N, R 13 W, $150 and exchange of property.

James C Hanna et ux to John F Haeni, lot 4, J B Parker's subdivision of tract conveyed to Antonio Keyes by Maria Antonia Villa de Reyes, situated on Central avenue, near East Eighth street, $6000.

Lars Erick Anderson to Hugo C Wancke, lot 8 of Lankershim ranch, Land and Water Company's subdivision of east 12,000 acres of S½ of Rancho ex-Mission of San Fernando, $1000.

Oclasco C Welbourn et ux to Ulyssee in favor of changing the name of the navel orange. That journal says:

"It may be news to some of our readers that the name of the navel orange is a commercial handicap to that superb fruit; but such is the fact. We are informed by an extensive grower and packer in this State that the man who handles more California navel oranges in New York than any other dealer, has made serious complaint against the name as a positive and conspicuous drawback in the introduction of the fruit to the best class of consumers in the eastern markets. In short, the name is not agreeable, and operates to an appreciable extent against the fruit. It is not necessary at this time to go into the case anatomically; the mere suggestion of the impropriety of such a name will serve to remind almost any one of some unpleasant experience in this connection."

The California Fruit Grower then goes on to make suggestions for new names for the leading orange of this section.

This may be the first intimation to some people in Southern California that the navel orange has suffered in the eastern market on account of its name. The orange growers have had to endure many kinds of drawbacks in the shape of scale bugs, middlemen and so forth, but this is something new of its kind. Certainly, the minds of those who object to the name of this fruit must be constructed on a very schall and peculiar plan. They must belong to the same class as those good people who refer to the legs of chickens as "limbs" and who bring pressure to bear on the administration of museums and public places to have copies of antique statuary draped. There will always, probably, be a sufficiently large number of people throughout the Eastern States who will consume our navel oranges on the strength of their quality, regardless of the name. sion of east 12,000 acres of S% of Rancho ex-Mission of San Fernando, $1000.

Hetty Green in the Role of Farmer.

Up in Vermont there is a very beautiful country place where Mrs. Hetty Green goes every summer with her husband and her daughter. She is there now, and were you to meet her any day walking along the road, with a pall of berries, or coming in from the gardens with a basket of tomatoes, you would judge her to be the happy wife of a well-to-do farmer.

"I'm here," says, the wealthy Mrs. Hetty, "because folks can't find me out without coming a long way. I'm here for my husband's rheumatism, and I'm here because my daughter isn't strong, and, more than all, I'm here for the reason that I'm a born farmer, and I love to work the ground and raise crops. I've raised everything we've had on the table for a month, even to the meat. You may doubt the meat part of my farming, but it is true. We live on chickens and ducks and turkeys and eggs. I'm not here all the time, because I've other interests, but some day I am going to live here, and then I will astonish all the farmers in the big crops I will get, and the money I will make off this little place. If I hadn't had a fortune in real estate in town left to me, you may be sure I'd never been driven from Eden to the noisy city—either for comfort or to make money."

importance in the south of Europe. Several attempts have been made to establish perfume factories in this State, but in every case there has been some drawback that has interfered with the success of the enterprise. In most cases it has been lack of capital that has prevented the consummation of the projects.

According to the San Francisco Call, after years of patient toil, hard study and aimost endless experiments, F. B. Beckett has discovered a process that seems destined to be the means of establishing an important industry on the Pacific Coast, and the only one of its kind in America.

Mr. Beckett's discovery consists of the art of extracting the odors of flowers almost instantly, thereby effecting a great saving in both labor and time over the present process.

The one thing above all others that makes Mr. Beckett's invention commercially valuable is the fact that 90 per cent. of the perfumes used in America have had their origin in foreign countries, France furnishing the largest portion of the odors used in making them.

Talking to a Call reporter, Mr. Beckett said:

"I am hardly ready to have my discovery of the invention heralded to the world as a process that will revolutionize the art of perfumery. I am free to admit, however, that I have a method of extracting the odors of flowers that will cheapen the cost of perfumes three-fourths. I have applied for and secured patents on each idea as quickly as they evolved, but until one or two minor details are perfected no one but the authorities at Washington will be admitted to any of the secrets of the process, the discovery of which has cost me years of hard study.

"Here are a few samples of perfumes which I have just made," continued Mr. Beckett, pointing to small vials of rose, violet and tuberose extracts. "You will observe that the bouquet of the rose, or any of the perfumes for that matter, is identical with that of the flower, which is not true of any perfume now on the market.

"The art of manipulating doriferous substances for the gratification sulting in violet, rose or jasmine extract, as the case might be.

"My process does away with all this time and labor, necessarily decreasing the cost of perfumes to the consumer. This question of cost has been the one that has prevented the manufacture of odors in America. No spot in the world is so richly endowed in the way of flowers as is California, and certainly no section is so favored by nature.

of flowers as is California, and certainly no section is so favored by nature.

"I honestly believe that the manufacture of perfume is destined to become the greatest industry of California, and that before many years the State will be one big flower garden."

Flower-farming is confined almost exclusively to the valley of the Var. France, the triangular portion of which has Grasse for its apex and the Mediterranean shore between Nice and Cannes for its base. The total area is about 116,000 acres. Here the jasmine, tuberose, cassia, rose and violet grow to perfection, and the process of enfleurage and maceration is employed to such an extent that it has become the perfume mart of the world. Last year there were gathered 3233 tons of roses, violets and orange blossoms. Most of the California flowers are perpetual bloomers, while in France the harvest time varies from thirty to sixty days. This would, of course, be an immense advantage to the flower-farmer here. Some years ago Congress sent a commission to examine the Yosemite Valley, with a view of utilizing the wealth of flowers which is to be found there, but it was determined that the cost of gathering would be so great as to preclude the possibility of competing with the European factories.

trolley traffic is compared with the death-rate on the great steam foods, the proportion is astonishingly in favor of the widely-denounced trolley. This is the more notable, as the steam roads have their tracks guarded from the intrusion of pedestrians to a great extent. Yet, in spite of the raising of the crossings at the more dangerous points, and the adoption of the block signal system, and other elaborate and ingenious precautions for the protection of life, the New York Central Railroad reports one death for every 69,000 passengers which it carries; the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, one death to every 67,000; the New York, Lake Erle and Western, one death to every 110,000. If the trolleys of any city made a death-rail with the cars were removed from the streets. In Brooklyn, where the trolley death-rate is relatively high, the proportion is only one in every 111,000 persons carried. Yet no one anything about the Central juggernaut or the Erle juggernaut. There is good traditional warrant for giving the prince of darkness his due, and these figures may be borne in mind when unlimited denunciation of the trolley is in progress.

FOR ELECTRIC STREET CARS?

The Massachusetts Railroad Commissioners have issued a circular, which enjoins every street railway in the State to put fenders, or lifeguards, in front of its cars, the selection of the particular form of fender being left to the discretion of the company. There is in many quarters a strong conviction that this is only begging the question of making street cars safe. A brakeman of great experience, which covered a period of thirty-four years spent in railway service, gave evidence last week, before a special committee of railroad investigation. When asked as to what form of fender he most fafored, he said that he was against all fenders, believing none of them to be of any account. The best fender, he added, was a good brake and a level-headed motorman. Brakes have been devised by which the motorman, by a slight movement of the hand, can almost instantaneously stop a car, while running even at a very high rate of speed. But these brakes are quite expensive, and possibly for this reason their adoption is deferred. The time will come, however, when the railroad companies will be compelled, both by public opinion and by business considerations, to adopt every practical appliance, no matter how expensive it may be, which will protect human life. The objections raised by the trolley companies to the use of them carries little weight, for steam cars, running at the rate of forty or fifty miles an hour, are often stopped by the application of air brakes, and the reversing of the engine to prevent accidents, even if the passengers are somewhat shaken 13.50.

cation of air brakes, and the reversing of the engine to prevent accidents, even if the passengers are somewhat shaken up by the operation. It would be better for the trolleys to slightly bruise a few people than to kill one by their inability to stop in time to prevent such killing. In the long run the most expensive appliances for the trolley cars may become the cheapest. The solution of the problem may possibly be found in a combination fender and brake. A fender has already been designed which brakes the car automatically on coming into contact with any object on the track. PROPORTION OF DEATHS BY TROLLEY ACCIDENT.

It would seem that the much-maligned electric trolley is becoming reputable. No sooner has the successful working of the electric conduit system been demorgirated, and the storage battery so fisproved as to possibly fit it for traction work, than the public begin to find out that the trolley, which in many places may be superseded by the new systems, is doing a great deal more good than harm. Among a thousand benefits that it has wrough is the raising of the health standard of cities by enabling the poor to enjoy, and even live in, the pure air of the country. It has saved many more lives than it has destroyed. A comparison has just been made, which throws an entirely new light on the question of deaths by trolley accidents. When the Guibal does a number of wonderfully clever, and, mysterious feats of magic, but the great feature of his appearance is the psychological seance in conjunction with Mile. Ortiz. He puts the young lady to sleep and at suggestions from the audience, whispered to him, she does whatever is directed without a word being spoken; writes a name, remoyes a gentleman's tie, mimics with a cane taken from the hands of a gentleman in the audience the playing of a violin and numerous other feats that are beyond comprehension unless we are to believe that it is another case of Trilby and Svengall, although it is but fair to say that M. Guibal is quite a different personage from the hypnotizer of Du Maurier's story. In any event it is a great song and a violin solo while gyrating about the stage on roller skates. A GERMAN BANQUET.

The Founding of the Empire Duly Celebrated.

About fifty German-American citi-zens celebrated the twenty-fifth anni-versary of the founding of the German Empire by holding a banquet at th Palace cafe last evening. The table was set in the form of an "L," and the menu was all that the appetite of an epicure could have desired. Judge Louis Gottschalk presided as toastmaster, and himself toasted tropper the United States and the American Government. Other toasts were "The Fatherland," "Frince Bismarck," "Kaiser Wilhelm," and a host of other German institutions and celebrities, Among the speakers were Dr. Joseph Kurtz, Dr. Newland, Messrs. Werner, Meyer of Glendale, Alexander Mindt, Leonard and Adae, The latter related some interesting reminiscences of the American war of the rebellion. A feature of the gathering was that nearly all the men present, though loving sons of the Fatherland, are loyal American citizens, many of them having helped to defend the Union. Strong patriotic sentiments pervaded the speeches, and the health of the President of the United States was drunk with even greater gusto than that of the head of the empire whose founding was the occasion of the Celebration. All the speaking was in German, and German songs enlivened the programme. Judge Louis Gottschalk presided a Christian Endeavor Meeting.

A meeting of the city union of Christian Endeavor was held last night, at which most of the local societies were well represented. The union expects to direct much aggressive work during the coming year. Miss Taylor, of the First Presbyterian Church, reported a society at the Soldiers' Home to which delegates from the city will be sent once a month to assist in the meetings. Mr. Mason of the Pacific Gospel Mission thanked the societies for the work which they have undertaken of supplying a leader and singers for the mission one evening each week. At the request of the president, Rev. George E. Dye, an invitation was extended Mr. Rader of Oakland to address a mass-meeting on the subject of "Good Citizenship." An Address by Mrs. Ballington Boo at Staten Island

. "The revolting creature, gaudily attred in man's clothing, possessed of strange notions about the home, wife-hood and motherhood, scorned and shunned by the men, is not my idea of the new woman. The new woman, according to the popular acceptation speaks of children as 'brats,' says they tire and aggravate her, and so she bestows all her love upon some ugly little pug-nosed dog which she carries in one of her mannish pockets. She is also a man-hater and is going forth to seek emancipation and a world-wide rule for emancipation and a world-wide rule for er sex, she declares it her misison to own and belittle him. "If you were to ask me what the Salvation Army would do with the new woman," continued Mrs. Booth, "in reply, we will first of all take her dress and change it. Out of her huge sleeves we will make dresses for the ragged children in the slums, and other garments worn by her, which I forbear to mention, we would give to the sex to whom they belong. Her books, filled with pernicious literature, we would throw in the fire along with her aigrettes and chewing-gum, and after this I think we would prescribe a strong-willed, self-assertive husband who would teach her that there is something to honor in the other sex. I believe in the advanced woman, I believe she is capable of making a good mother and wife as though she had never stepped upon the platform or been admitted to the bar. Let the education of women go on, only while you are training them do not forget to develop the heart."

heart."

Mrs. Booth said, however, that in Denver a corps of mounted "cavalry women" had been organized and were doing effective work in the mountains of Colorado under the leadership of Capt. Blanche Cox. There the army carries on much of its work among the miners and the use of horses was found to be almost a necessity.

Patrolman Kelly, who was on duty at the station, turned in several ambulance calls, and five ambulances from the surrounding hospitals promptly responded. Meantime the woodwork of the wrecked car caught fire and was soon in a blaze. Four cars were completely destroyed before the trainhands were able to uncouple them and four cars were telescoped by the collision. THE PANA FIRE

It Has Been Subdued with Appar ently no Lives Lost. (REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.) PANA (Ill.,) Sept. 2.—The old shaft of the Pana Coal Company is ablaze and the lives of three men are in peril. It is possible that these men, who are imprisoned in the pit, may escape by shaft No. 2, but this is by no means certain. The fire was first noticed at 8:30 o'clock last night. In a few minutes great volumes to the pit of t umes of dense, black smoke came out of the mouth of the pit. Great excitemen the mouth of the pit. Great excitement ensued and soon a crowd assembled at the mouth of the mine. People did not know how many persons were in the pit and there were fears of great loss of life. At length the officials made known the fact that only three men were below when the fire broke out. The origin of the flames is not known, but it is supposed that the fire was caused by an explosion of gas in the abandoned stables.

Last night the entire force of digger of the mines were at work in shaft No 2 in an endeavor to rescue the imprisoned men. It was not known exactly where the men were engaged when the fire broke out and it was clearly sent the work of rescue would not be easy. There were fears that when entrance to the burning mines could be effected it would be found that the three coal-diggers had succumbed to gas, if not to fire.

LATER:—The fire in the Pana mine has been subdued. All miners appear to have escaped.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(By Ajlantic Cable.) Such a course, Carnegie says, would probably command support in Canada, Australia and all the large cities populated by Carnegie then says that the language of the call for a convention of Trishs Americans at Chicago shows the despair and disappointment of men who see in the advent of the Conservative party of Great Britain to power no hope for justice for Ireland. The letter then gives Carnegie's views in favor of home rule, and concludes with saying: "The question of the conservative with saying: "The question of the call of and concludes with saying: "The question is not only a British one, but unfortunately an American one as well, casting its baneful influence over our politics."

The sojourners at Camp Indolence, in San Bernardino county, are not so in-dolent as the name of the camp would imply. The Times correspondent at San Bernardino writes that the "in-dolent" campers are making grand arrangements for the proper celebration of Admission day, the festivities to conclude with a colossal barbecue. In addition to all this a newspaper, printed and published on the spot, edles, and called the Rattler, is issued weekly, the contents of which are read by the editress-in-chief every Sunday the campers assembled, after which they go and pray "from all other ills, good Lord, deliver us."

THE MANUFACTURERS.

Gathering Recruits—The First Regu-

There were not many people at last evening's meeting of the Manufacturers' Association, nor was there much work done. There were several brief speeches on the topic of the great desirability of increasing the membership of the association. Mr. Pridham said: "Now, there are twelve of ug here tonight. I will promise to bring in five new members next meeting. Let each man present swear to do the same, and then we will have sixty new members."

President Chamberlin smlled approval at this mathematical demonstration, and said that he thought he could promise five. But the other members looked a little dubious. Then Mr. Loew arose. "Let us announce that after our next meeting the initiation fee will be raised to $5. Until that time, the $1 rate will prevail. That will prove a strong incentive, I am sure." Mr. Loew's motion was enthusiastically adopted, and the meeting adjourned.

CORNER-STONE LAID.

Presbyterian Church.

The corner-stone of the Boyle Heights Presbyterian Church was laid yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the presence of a large and interested company. The programme was opened with the singing of the long-meter doxology by the congregation, followed by an invocation by Prof. J. W. Parkhill of Occidental College. The corner-stone hymn, written especially for the occasion by Miss Maude Bell, accompanied on the organ by Miss Cromwell. Selections from the scriptures, appropriate to the occasion, were read by the Rev. J. M. Gardiner, followed by the hymn, "The Solid Rock," sung by the Sundayschool children.

President E. N. Condit delivered an address, in which he referred warmly to the great interest the young people had taken in the church. The message from God, whenever it comes to the soul, brings a feeling of peculiar nearness, of close contact with God, and one feels that he must erect some memorial. The speaker referred to the story of Jacob's erecting the pillar, building around it and calling it Bethel. The world looks to sanctuaries like this as pledges of faith and hope in God and the future life, but the best memorials we can erect in life are those of our character and lives, showing the influence of Christ. The transformation of the character and heart is the essential thing before God. As this stone is laid, let the impression be erected upon Presbyterian Church. The corner-stone of the Boyle Heights

The corner-stone was laid at the southwestern corner with charming dignity, by Mrs. Elizabeth Hollenbeck, whose, great generosity has largely helped to make the building of the church possible.

The stone is a handsome block of Sespe brownstone, two feet in length by one in depth and one in thickness, and upon its face is cut "Jesus Christ Himself," and the year 1895.

After the stone had been slipped into place, an impressive prayer was offered by Rev. J. H. Stewart, moderator of the Presbytery of Los Angeles. The hymn of consecration was sung by the congregation, and the ceremonies closed with the benediction by the Rev. E. S. Chase.

The City Hall was deserted yesterday save for the few stragglers that wended their way into the office of wended their way into the office of Superintendent Foshay, who has but just returned from an Eastern trip. Acting Mayor Teed occupied his office the entire day, in anticipation of a poswhile telegram giving information from the Supreme Court with reference to the legality of the refunding bonds. The telegram did not come.

The Courthouse yesterday gave its first yawn and stretch as a preliminary sign of awakening from its summer slumber. Judges York and McKinley held court, and considered a formida-ble call calendar. The street railroad injunction was continued until today.

AT THE CITY HALL. SUPERINTENDENT FOSHAY.

The Results of His Trip in the

Prof. J. A. Foshay, who stands at the head of the schools in this city in the capacity of superintendent, has returned to his home after an absence of several weeks spent in traveling through the Eastern and Central States. He was occupied yesterday in attending to the preparationos that are being made for the reopening of the city schools, but gave a Times reporter who called upon him, a cordial welcome, and in answer to questions propounded by the reporter, talked quite freely of his and matters of interest connected with it. The professor announced be-fore his departure for the East, that he proposed making a vigorous effort to convince the Executive Committee of National Educational Association the National Educational Association that Los Angeles would be a very fit and proper place for the holding of the next session of the association. Prof. Foshay, however, was not able to see personally any of the five members of the Executive Committee, with whom the power of decision in the matter rests.

"I made a flying trip to Peoria, Ill.," said Prof. Foshay, "where N. C. Dougherty, the president of the association and of the committee resides, but in spite of telegrams sent to him before my spite of telegrams sent to him before my departure for the place, I was not able to find him or see him personally. He has, however," continued Prof. Foshay, "written a letter, which has just come to me, and in which he declares that personally he favers Los Angeles, but in making a decision in the matter he will be obliged to consider the programme, and number who can be induced to attend the association's meeting."

Prof. Foshay stated that Mr. Dough erty is anxious to secure a number of European sayants to attend and ad-dress the association, who would, per-haps, shrink from crossing the conti-nent after making the voyage across the ocean. The Fabyan House, in the White Mountains of New Hampshire, to considered to stand equal with Los considered to stand equal with Los Angeles as the place for the session of 1896, while Asbury Park and Duluth are also offering extra inducements for the meeting to be located in their respective precincts. Prof. Foshay is conducting meeting to be located in their respective precincts. Prof. Foshay is conducting a correspondence with the remaining members of the Executive Committee in reference to the matter, and, while not certain of ultimate success in his efforts, he is yet confident that this city will secure the coveted prize. The next session of the association, which would in all probability be attended by from ten to twelve thousand teachers, is to be held in July, 1896. The Executive Committee will meet October 15, 1895, to decide upon the location of the meeting, and in the interim between that date and the present time Prof. Foshay, aided by the commercial and municipal bodies of the city, will make a heroic of the city, will make a heroid effort to furnish irresistible induce-ments in the shape of reduced transaudience-room accommodations, and such other attractions as will have weight with the members of the com-

Prof. Foshay visited the schools of Chicago, Boston, Cambridge and New York, while absent, obtaining a number of new ideas with reference to the educational manners and methods in vogue in those centers of culture.

Prof. Housh, the newly elected principal of the High School, was closeted with Prof. Foshay for several hours yesterday, in consultation concerning the new features which it is proposed to introduce in the curriculum of the High School. THE TAX LEVY.

The Legality of the Funding Bonds Not Yet Decided.

No business was transacted in the City Hall yesterday, the Mayor's office being the only department presided over by its head. Acting Mayor Teed waited in expectation of a telegram from the Supreme Court with regard to a decision upon the legality of the funding bonds, but no telegram arrived, and the tax levy will have to be made upon the basis of their illegality. Several of the Councilmen claim that the levy can be made lower than the figures published in The Times of Monday, but their reasons for the belief are not as yet forthcoming. The matter will, perhaps, be discussed in the open sessions of the Council today, and a special session will be called later in the week to take final action in the matter.

Rival Street Car Companies Cross Swords in Court.

Years ago, when the Los Angele street railway system was in its in-fancy, a sharp, legal battle was fought out to the bitter end, as to whether or not the electric cars should be run or the cable-car tracks. The Electric Rail-way Company persisted even unto the Supreme Court, and finally won its case, securing the passage of a law which allowed it to run its cars for a space of three blocks over the tracks of which allowed it to run its cars for a space of three blocks over the tracks of any rival line.

The electric company has now again entered the field against a rival, and the dispute is again over the joint use of a portion of the track, but this time the shoe is on the other foot, and the company is fighting tooth and nail to keep a new aggressor from doing the very thing originally done by itself.

Last Thursday evening a restraining order was issued by Judge Clark, in chambers, enjoining the Los Angeles Traction Company from connecting the track of the new street railroad with the track of the electric company's road at the intersection of Third street with Stevenson avenue, and from operating its cars over the track of the electric company from that point along Third street to Santa Fe avenue, and thence northerly along Santa Fe avenue to a point opposite the Santa Fe's La Grande Station; or from interfering in any way with the overhead construction of the older railroad.

The order was made returnable to Judge McKinley, in Department St., yesterday at 10 a.m. At that hour, all that could be heard of the judge was a telephone message continuing the case until 2 p.m., so the rival companies endeavored to possess their souls in patience until the afternoon.

Promptly at 2 o'clock the attorneys of both companies were in court, J. D. Bicknell, Esq., representing the plainting both companies were in court, J. D. Bicknell, Esq. representing the plaintiff and W. H. Wilde, Esq., of the firm of Lamme & Wilde, appearing for the defendant. When the case was called, Mr. Bicknell rose and stated that the defendant had filed an answer to the complete appropriate by these affidaytis. fendant had filed an answer to the com-plaint, supported by three affidavits, that afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, and re-quested that the case be continued until today in order that the plaintiff might be prepared to meet the allegations of the defendant, and to file counter-affidawits.

Mr. Wilde was anxious for the imm diate hearing of the case, and sented that the defendant was in for the double purpose of showing that the restraining order was improvidently issued, and in answer to the citation t issued, and in answer to the citation to show cause why a permanent injunction should not be issued. The two attorneys argued for some time, but Judge McKinley finally cut the Gordian knot by continuing the case until 2 p.m. today.

The answer filed by the Traction Company in response to the injunction, states that, as assignee of H. E. Storrs, it owns the franchise and right-of-way to construct a single or double-track electric street railway, with all appurtenances thereto, over the disputed territory, under ordinance No. 2267, granting this franchise to H. E. Storrs and his assigns. The Traction Company admits its intention to use the track of the older corporation over the blocks. the older corporation over the blocks mentioned, but denies that such occu-

the older corporation over the blocks mentioned, but denies that such occupancy will in any way injure the railroad of the Electric Company.

Such use of the rails as the defendant proposes to make is strictly within the limit of the law, and, moreover, on May 14, W. S. Hook, general manager of the Traction Company, notified F. W. Wood, general manager of the Electric Company, of the proposed plan of jointly using the track, and then and there tendered $1490 as compensation, that being half the cost of that portion of the track.

Manager Wood refused the offer, but Mr. Hook states that it is still open, and that the Traction Company is willing to bear half the cost of maintaining and repairing that portion of the road.

The answer of the defendant, furthermore, alleges that the proposed interference with the overhead construction of the old railroad consists simply in insulating the wires of the plaintiff corporation, that they may not be damaged by any leaks in the current that might possibly be caused by the proximity of the other wires, were not such precautions properly taken.

Attorney Wilde states as his opinion that the new railroad will be a great boon to the city. It is constructed according to the latest improved methods, and from the best possible materials. sixty-pound steel rails being used throughout the line. The entire system is the most perfect and complete on the Pacific Coast, and has the unparalleled.

without a dollar of bonded indebtedness or obligations of any description.

Not a dollar has been asked from the citizens of Los Angeles in furtherance of the enterprise, which has been carried out entirely by business men, who saw a chance for a good investment, and improved it, casting in their lot with the future of this city, and proving their faith in that future by their works more than by words.

Messrs. T. J. and W. S. Hook, the president and the general manager of the Traction Company, are from Jacksonville, Ill. They are introducing some Eastern innovations in the new cars here in Los Angeles, notably in the bars which prevent the passengers from alighting between the tracks, and so endangering life and limb by risking collisions with passing cars, and in the inflexible rule which relegates smokers to the back platform.

Much interest is felt in the outcome of the injunction case, and Department Six bids fair to be the center of attraction at the Courthouse.

About $250 was the net benefit from the recent "midsummer fete," held in St. James Park, and nearly $100 has been subscribed since. Several people have begun to give a definite sum at regular intervals. The expenses of the affair are generally not very great, but when there are many operations to perform much more money is needed than at other times. The patients are, in almost all cases, supplied with medicines without charge, for there have been several donations of drugs.

The polyclinic never interferes with the work of regular physicians. The patients who come there are people who could not possibly pay for medical attendance, and who cannot bear the thought of ranking themselves as paupers by going to the County Hospital. In not over a dozen cases have people applied for medical aid when they were really able to pay a physician, and these were told to go elsewhere. And in none of these cases did the nine men who are doing this work recommend the applicant to a particular doctor.

These nine physicians have recently started a periodical, The Polyclinic Journal. It is not supported by the funds of the institution, and has no connection with it, except that the same men are interested. But their experiences in this work, of course, furnish valuable material for the magazine.

AN UNHAPPY FAMILY.

Swedish Tailor is Charged with Beating His Wife.

The little settlement in the north-western part of the city, lying north of Elysian avenue and west of Alvarado street, experienced some excitement yesterday afternoon when officers were called upon for assistance. It was another case of man's inhumanity to woman—a husband shamefully and cruelly whipping his wife and destroy-woman—a nusband shamefully and cruelly whipping his wife and destroying the furniture.

The man's name is 'Lend, a Swede, and a tailor. From his wife, a prepossessing-looking woman, it was learned that her husband's visits home were about twice in a month, and each time she was the subject of his temper, with a growing tendency to greater cruelty and more threatening demeanor. During the fracas yesterday a dress was almost torn from her body, her hair was twisted and disordered, her right hand badly lacerated by a broken piece of glassware thrown at her, which she prevented from striking her face by interposing the hand.

Several of the neighbors stated that the man's conduct is worse than brutal, and he has repeatedly threatened to kill the wife and a twelve-months'-old child.

BOY MILITIA.

THE FUN AND EXPENSE OF NEIGHBORHOOD COMPANY.

That Will be an Honor to the Community and Keep Active, Frolicsome Lads Out of Mischief.

(From a Special Contributor to The Times.) Now that the summer holidays are drawing to a close, and Tom, Dick and Harry are leaving seashore and moun-tains for home, what better plans can they make for the winter than mustering a neighborhood militia. One boy in a village or district rarely amounts to much in the eyes of his community, but when forty or fifty well-drilled, uni-formed fellows get out for dress parade of a crisp Saturday afternoon, people up and down the street begin to open their eyes and treat the little company their eyes and treat the little company with respect. They are a power thus, either to act as protectors when danger threatens, or merely to march in a body to church sociables, and infuse a spirit of liveliness into bazaar or fair.

Every well-constituted boy loves soldiering naturally. Fife and drum have lost none of their potency, and with the Stars and Stripes leading the way it's a fine thing to quick step to "Yankee Doodle."

A MILITIAMAN'S DUTIES. . Naturally , the , neighborhood leader will take this matter in hand first, look over all the available material, and is-sue a call for a preliminary meeting. There he should explain the duties and privileges of uniting as an amateur troop. It means giving up cigarettes, intoxicants and foul language, devoting intoxicants and foul language, devoting not less than three evenings a week to drill, with a willingness to submit to discipline, and by home gymnastics attaining a flat back, square shoulders, full chest and straight legs. It is not all fun by any manner of means, but the night work and self-denial are more than compensated for by proud moments on the parade ground, not to mention the good fellowship and club privileges militiamen enjoy.

The young organizer will also make clear to his hearers that the infantry is the main strength of the army, and it is an old maxim that "no cavalry and no

the main strength of the army, and it is an old maxim that "no cavalry and no artillery can stand against perfect in-fantry properly handled"; therefore the little bodies of boys' brigades may some day become efficient foot soldiers, and in time of war prove among the most necessary and valiant defenders of their country. country

MANUAL OF ARMS.

The boy desirous of forming a troop would do well to invest 50 cents in a little book by N. Hershler, called "The litle book by N. Hershler, called "The Guardsman's Handbook," containing extracts from the United States army regulations, such as the duties of the infantry soldier, practical instructions for marching, rifle shooting, guardmounting, shiftes, signals, and much valuable advice. Another 50 cents will produre the "Handbook of Boys' Brigade," by C. B. Morrell. A third manual called "The Drum and Fife Instructor" ($1.50.) gives the principles of drumbeating, the scale of the fife, and the rudiments of music.

The next step will be to energy the rudiments of music.

The next step will be to engage the services of some one qualified to drill an awkward squad. Nine times out of ten there is a father, brother, uncle or cousin who, having served during the civil war, will be glad to lend his assistence in getting the boys into shape. Old soldlers are still numerous enough throughout the country to secure proper training without an outlay of cash. At first the discipline will seem pretty rough but by keeping next summer's camping in mind, and remembering that the day may come when the country will need in mind, and remembering that the day may come when the country will need just such sons, the first and hardest part of the business will soon be over.

THE QUESTION OF A UNIFORM. As with many other details the com-bined and individual purses of the hined and individual purses of the young militia-men, must regulate the cost of uniform.

It is as well to bear in mind that the army of every nation has its prevailing color, that of the British being scarlet, that of the French and American blue, that of the Austrian white, and so on. Consequently it is better, perhaps, to adopt some shade of blue for the base color of the jacket, and if something more effective than the dull purple-blue of the regular army officers is desired, a bright sky-blue trimmed with silver lace, and worn with trousers would answer excellently.

In the following estimates of prices given, it must be noticed that those quoted at the lowest figure are subject to discounts when a brigade is fitted out.

brigadier, major and lieutenant-general.

Nor need parents think that money they give their sons to spend in fitting out a company is thrown away. If a thing is attempted it had better be well done, and a boys' brigade should be a matter of pride to the town where it has its origin. It is not difficult to gain the interest of the citzens in perfecting the military detail of the little regiment, which ought to remember the old saying: "The better you dress a sodier the more highly he will be thought of."

paupers it is the duty of the State to use its best means to prevent the existence of paupers, and one of the most direct means to that end is to see to it that all the children in the State are thoroughly instructed in reading, writing and arithmetic, and are substantially trained in the practice of some form of remunerative handiwork, writes the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in a vigorous article on "Compulsion in ing and arritmetic, and are substantially trained in the practice of some form of remunerative handiwork, writes the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in a vigorous article on "Compulsion in Child Training," in the September Ladies' Home Journal. There is work enough to be done in this big world by people who are willing to work and who know how. The idea of immense wealth secured by some process of financial legerdemain has so pervaded the general atmosphere that a sufficiency has ceased to satisfy, and a young man resolves either to speculate his way to fortune, or to steal some one's else fortune, or if both these expedients fail, to turn professional idler and subsiat on charity. The incentive to substantial equipment for the struggle of life is thus withdrawn. If I were the State I would compel every child to acquire the means of an honest livelihood, even at the risk of the whip, and then if, having acquired that means, he failed to avail of it to his own maintenance, I would commit him to the workhouse and keep him at hard labor there till he experienced a change of heart. There is no respectable consistency between State's care of the poor and State's neglect of stringent means for preventing the existence of the poor. If a government ought to be "paternal" to the extent of feeding paupers, it ought to be "paternal" to the sextent of feeding paupers to be able to feed themselves. The root difficulty in all this matter is the indisposition of parents and other constituted authorities to make serious business of laying substantial foundations in the early years of our young people, boys and girls. One of the chief sources of misery among the working classes is the wife's ignorance of the practical task of becoming proficient in a self-sustaining way upon some line or other of remunerative industry, it would be a great benison to society in general. In whatever direction we look and whatever improvement we seek to effect, we come back to it again and again that the end is determined by the beginning, and t

Travel by Electricity.

Travel by Electricity.

(Chicago Tribune:) It is reported from New York that some capitalists there think of building electric lines between the large cities at the East. They have under consideration the construction of a new line between Jersey City and Philadelphia and then the probable building of one from Philadelphia to Baltimore, this perhaps to be followed by another connecting Baltimore with Washington. If that be done with an acceptable result the next step will be to construct a line between New York and Boston, and following this will come the building of lines between any two cities in this country which seem to offer paying business.

and Boston, and following this will come the building of lines between any two cities in this country which seem to offer paying business.

The idea is to run single cars at short time intervals and at a high speed. For the line between New York and Philadelphia it is thought there may be sufficient business for intervals of about five minutes each way. This, with a speed of a hundred miles per hour, would allow the cars to be ten miles apart, reducing to a minimum the dander of colhsion. The connection between Jersey City and trolley lines in the suburbs of Philadelphia would occupy not more than fifty minutes, enabling a passenger to make the trip between the two great cities in about an hour, and it is thought that many people would be willing to pay higher rates for this great saving of time than those now paid for rail transportation. It is possible that the patronage ultimately would be so great as to make the business a paying one at less rates than those charged for traveling the distance today. In regard to the danger from increased speed it is said the Westinghouse people have in hand plans by which it may be possible to develop an automatic brake that will serve to check the speed of a car automatically when there is a block ahead. It is not forgotten that collision at a speed of a hundred miles or more per hour would mean annihilation, but the possibilities of this would be rendered remote by the arrangements contemplated, and about as much linjury to life and limb would result from collision at a speed of sixty miles as from one occurring under nearly double that rate. If these projects are carried out they will be little more than extensions of the trolley system now in operation between many points that are several miles asunder in or near the big cities. The great question is how far the elec-will be little more than extensions of the trolley system now in operation between many points that are several miles asunder in or near the big cities. The great-question is how far the electric power can be transmitted economically along copper wires and used for purposes of propulsion, taking into account the inequality of demands upon the sources of supply due to difference in the total weight to be moved from it at a stated time. The latter point is one which hitherto has not received much attention in the papers that have discussed electric traction on a large scale, though it is kept in mind by experts. It is evident that an enormous loss of effective power would / result from great irregularity in the quantity of force called for from the wires connected with any one set of dynamos, and it is this consideration that hitherto has limited electric traction to the comparatively short lines on which nearly the, same number of cars are moving continuously. A radical departure from observance of this essential to economy in the use of the trolley perhaps might be met by the employment of the accumulator or storage battery, which gives out power as wanted, but with the present disadvantage of a great percentage of loss in the double transformation. If these difficulties can be overcome electric force may be used with great benefit for freight transportation, as well as for passenger travel.

Color Scheme for Small House.
How few people when furnishing a small house or fat remember that old blue is one of the happiest colors to choose for a foundation, writes Frances Ann Hoadley in the September Lädles' Home Journal. In a house where, as a rule, all the rooms open into one another, especial care must be taken to preserve harmony. It is better to select one color which shall run through all the rooms. Old blue is the color par excellence in such a case, combined with tan, gray or white for the rugs, while the same scheme prevails in the heavy draperies. Color Scheme for Small House.

A lovely little house in mind has a parior and library in one. The large rug, covering the greater part of the room, is old blue and gray. In from of the fireplace is a long, light gray fu one. A broad, low lounge is covere with dark gray. It is always bette to cover, a lounge in a solid color as it takes more kindly to the pillows of end less hues. The large dining-room rug is old blue and tan, with smaller rug of tawny brown. The bedroom has a old blue and large white rug and whit fur smaller ones. Let old blue predom inate, everywhere in the floor furnishings and draperies, but not to the exclusion of all other colors, elsewhere for where one color only is used the effect as a whole is flat. bird's-eye maple is exquisite where two or three pieces of fresh old mahogany are added. Each heightens the other's beauty in a most charming manner. A room furnished entirely in mahogany gives a heavy, dismal effect, but in a parlor and library combined, say in a flat or small house, place a large, quaintly-carved old desk, and one of those highly-polished, round cardiables, and see what an oir they give to the modern and equally beautiful furniture. In the dining-room a square mahogany table with a surface like glass, and even a small buffet or china-cabinet, will be quite enough of the antique to set off everything else in the room. Have exquisitely-drawn linen dolles, candles in rose-colored shades and a profusion of say pink carnations and you have a lovely lunch-table. In a house the hall should be a leading feature-enticing, not cold, bare and cheerless, repelling one from further acquaintance with the house and its mistress. A hall is like an introduction.

The Taouist Religion.

(Harper's Weekly:) The ceremonies observed on occasions of death all have their origin in the demonology of the Taouists. Paper clothes, paper palaces, paper pipes, and paper money are burnt when a man dies, to provide the soul of the dead with means of bribing its way through the devil's kingdom to its rest, and the clothes burned are often patterned after high officials gowns, in order to impress more favorably the spirits encountered on the mysterious journey.

Taouist priests are called to consult the soul of the departed to ascertain its wishes. They discover the locality for burlal, and indicate all details of this last service to the dead.

The Shanghal Railroad met its doom from this source. The priest informed the people that the rumbling noise of the cars and the steam engine were distasteful to the dead who filled the numerous mounds along its course. To appease the wrath of the dead, chinese capitalists bought the road, with its equipments, and tore up the tracks, and stored the entire plant under sheds at Shanghal. Thus it is seen that this religion stands in the way of all innovations in that old country, and the first thing necessary in order to introduce railroads into China is to dethrone the priests and infuse a little commonsense into the people.

During the prevalence of the great famine in northwestern China in 1874-78 there was an unusual flood in the valley of the Yang-Tse-Kiang. The priests endeavored to solve the mystery of their uneven distribution of rain. The censure fell upon the royal household at Peking. It is the duty of the Emperor to enter the Temple of Heaven twice a year and invoke the blessings of heaven upon the people. He always asks for rain among other things, and the impression obtained that the Emperor had hurriedly asked for rain, but had not taken the pains to state where he wanted it. The result was that floods came in some places, while famine from drought came in other parts of the empire. This feeling was producing a general spirit of revolt, when in 1878 the rai

A TIGER-TAMER.

PROUD DISTINCTION ACHIEVED BY A LOS ANGELES BOY.

Perform Numerous Tricks—He Graduated from a Horse-corral to a Circus Ring.

James McElroy, a young man who was born in Los Angeles and made this city his home up to seven years ago, has achieved the distinction of being the only man on earth who ever succeeded in taming and training a tigress so that the beast became absolutely subject to his control. Incidentally, McCarlon, white and it is modest subject to his control. Incidentally, Mc-Eiroy has won for himself a modest fortune, has gained a poeition equalled by none of the great wild animal tam-ers of the world, and enjoys the prestige of drawing a larger salary than is paid to any other man in his profession. McEiroy was born in this city twenty-six years ago. His father was for many years a trader and dealer in horses, but eventually he gave up that business and opened a harness shop on South Spring street. The younger McEiroy and opened a harness shop on South Spring street. The younger McElroy received his earlier training in the Los Angeles public schools.

'Upon arriving in New York James McElroy found that earning a living was not so easy as to his inexperienced mind it appeared to be before he left home. He met with more than his share of vicissitudes until he secured employment with Brogen Hagenback, whose pre-eminence as a tamer of wild animals is acknowledged the world over. At first the young man performed menial service, such as carrying water for the beasts in Hagenback's collection and keeping their dens clean. In the end the great tamer took a fancy to the young man and made him one of his assistant trainers. This is considered an important position, for it is Microback, who sumiles the large how all over the world with their trained animals.

While acting as an assistant to Harnesselve.

while acting as an assistant to Hagenback young McElroy noticed that his employer easily handled every beast and reptile known to natural history, with the exception of the tigress. The males of the species Hagenback had succeeded in teaching a few simple tricks, but he exercised all his knowledge on the females without success. The Los Angeles youth became ambitious to try his luck with a tigress and he asked Hagenback to let him do it. His employer's answer was:

"Young man, you can handle any animal in the collect! in if you like, except the tigresses. Keep away from the she cats or you'll be torn to pieces."

A few months later McElroy learned that the Syndicate Circus and Paris Hippodrome then in winter quarters at Columbus, O., had received a tigress cub from an agent at Amoy, China. He applied for permission to become the attendant of the baby tigress and was engaged. McElroy permitted nobody but himself to perform a service for the kitten. He fed her, watered out.

but himself to perform a service for the kitten. He fed her, watered her, exercised her, played with her, cleaned out her den, and actually slept with her in his arms. He taught her to know that she was dependent upon him for everything. One day one of his employers saw him playing with her in the stables and asked what he was doing.

"If you do you are a wonder and I'll give you $6000 the first day she rides in public," said the Los Angeles lad.

"If you do you are a wonder and I'll give you $6000 the first day she rides in public," said the showman.

Before long Victoria became too large to carry around like a kitten. Then McElroy had a large circular steel boned cage built. Within the inclosure he erected a contrivance with a post and ropes so that the tigress could be lifted clear from the ground and swung to any part of the ring. He put a harness on Victoria with an iron ring standing up from her back. Then the trainer had a thick leather cover made to protect a horse's body and neck from Victoria's claws and teeth. In Henry Chappelle, McElroy found a man who had the nerve to enter the cage with himself and the tigress. Chappelle was armed with an ordinary blacksnake whip, while McElroy carried a whip with a long lash and a thick handle loaded heavily with lead. When all was ready and the horse, over whose eyes blinds were fastened, was galloping around inside the cage, the tigress was let loose. McElroy fastened a hook at the end of a pulley rope to the ring on Victoria's harness and gave a signal that caused Chappelle to pull the tigress into mid air. This indignity enraged her majesty so much that she snarled in a blood-curdling manner and lashed the atmosphere furiously with her paws and tail. McElroy gave another signal and his assistant swung Victoria onto the horse's back.

There was a quick movement of the tigress paws and off came the covering on the horse's back.

There was a quick movement of the tigress and lashed her with his blacksmae. The enraged animal made a leap for him, and with her an u

George Ferguson by name, and continued with his training. Twice a day Victoria was given her lesson until McElroy had her so that she would go through her paces without any harness whatever. Two weeks ago last Saturday McElroy gave Victoria her first, public exhibition. That was in San Francisco. The tigress performed samirably, and after the show William Sells redeemed the promise made twenty-two months ago by handing McElroy five $1000 bills. He also gave the young trainer a solid silver plate upon which was engraved his thanks.

THE MOON'S ECLIPSE. The Programme of Luna's Perform ance This Evening.

The Programme of Luna's Performance This Evening.

An interesting event will happen this evening. The earth will come between the sun and moon; or rather the moon will float into the long conical shadow of the earth. The edge of that shadow as it advances over the moon's face, is always the segment of a circle, thus furnishing ocular proof of the rotundity of the earth.

But when the moon is wholly immersed in the earth's shadow it will not be hid entirely from view, and why? That question can best be answered by placing the spectator, in imagination, on the moon itself. The unlighted side of the earth being turned toward the lunar spectator, he sees a dark orb four times the apparent diameter of our moon, and presenting sixteen times its area. But this dark orb is edged with a bright ring. This ring is the earth's atmosphere projecting in every direction eighty miles from its surface, or about one-hundredth of its diameter. The sun rays shining through this atmospheric envelope illuminate it and forms a ring of light brilliant enough to sensibly light up the moon's eclipsed surface.

But that light is not silvery; it is copsensibly light up the moon's eclipsed surface.

But that light is not silvery; it is coppery. When, toward evening, the level rays of the sun come through hundreds of miles of humid atmosphere, the sir and its vapors act like a prism and defiect the light, giving us the varied and glowing tints of sunsat. So it way be assumed that the ring of light surrounding the earth, as observed by the man in the moon, instead of being white or colorless, is of a lovely rosy huc, and, falling upon the sombre surface of the shadowed moon, produces that duli reddish-yellow so characteristic of the lunar eclipse.

Outside of the shadow of totality there is a semi-shadow called the penumbra. This penumbra exists because the light of the sun comes from a broad disk instead of from a point. The moon first enters the penumbra, then into the black shadow, then it emerges from the shadow, and finally from the penumbra. This is about what will happen this evening, the events enumerated thus. The moon will make its first contact with the penumbra at 6:48 p.m.; first contact with shadow, 11:54 p.m.; last contact with shadow, 11:54 p.m.; last contact with shadow will be departing from 10:45 to 11:54 p.m.

As the moon revolves around the will be total-from 9:06 to 10:48 p.m.; and the shadow will be departing from 10:43 to 11:54 p.m.

As the moon revolves around the earth from west to east it will enter the shadow from the west, but for the same reason the shadow will move across the moon's face from east to west. In other words, the shadow will touch the eastern edge (or limb technically speaking) first, and leave the western limb last.

W. H. Knight, who supplied the above data, says that at the Lowe Observatory there will be an added interest to the eclipse observation this evening. The telescopic comet recently discovered by Dr. Swift is already so extremely faint that it cannot be seen while the moon is shining in the heavens. Tonight, however, the almost total obscuration of the moon's light will permit the comet to be observed to advantage, and it is quite possible that it may never be seen again.

CHARGES AGAINST MISS KELSO DE-

ian to the Society-Funds Satisfactorily Accounted For - The Grand Canyon Described.

An unusually large number of the members belonging to the Historical Society of Southern California were present at the society's meeting in Justice Morrison's courtroom last evening. The Publication Committee announced having procured from Mary E. Hart a paper descriptive of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, and, the lady being present, the chairman extended the customary invitation that the paper be read before the society. This was done, the reading being followed by a general discussion of the matter contained in the paper, A large number of photographic views, picturing the scenes described by the writter, were passed through the audience, and aided very much in giving the written descriptions a realistic setting.

ment was filed and the entire matter dismissed, the insinuations or suspicions of carelessness on the part of Miss Kelso in her disposition of the funds she had received being considered by the society unfounded. Before the adjournment of the meeting last evening the secretary reported having received certain books from the Royal College of Belles Lettres, in Stockholm, Sweden. H. D. Barrows was appointed a committee to procure certain documents belonging to the late Dr. R. S. Den, pertaining to his record as a ploneer in California, which documents Dr. Den had signified his intention of giving to the Historical Society.

The summer rush at the favorite island is now a thing of the past and, during the past few days there has been the usual exodus which marks the close of the season and the place has settled down to its lovely autumn quiet which, to many, is far more grateful than crowds and confusion. The Island Villa and Grand View hotels have closed and the harmy of cottagers and campers are rapidly stealing away. Monday's steamer bore away a crowd of people and all available remaining space was packed with a heterogeneous mass of baggage ranging from camp stools and rolls of bedding to gasoline stoves, bed springs and all the paraphernalia of camp life. The Metropole will remain open throughout the winter if occasion demands. Manager Fred Wilding is at the head, with A. C. Roscoe chief clerk.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

A VICTIM OF GASOLINE LEGIS-LATION. (From a Correspondent of The Times.)

"So you're going to run for the Legis-lature, are you Jim?" Without waiting for a reply the major continued: "Well, its simple if you sabe the wires. You're a young man, with a reputation and lots: of friends back of you; you're a good out-and-out Republican, and the disout-and-out Hepublican, and the district's gone with the party for the last twenty years, so all you've got to do is to work the primaries a little, corral the convention, capture the nomination, and you're elected. Looks easy, don't it? So it is." The major stopped long enough to catch his breath, and rattled on: "What's that you say, 'How about the voters?' Why, your stand on the canal question has made you mighty popular already, but," and he assumed an important manner and a confidential tone, "But, just pad up some catchy like," the works and the same catchy like, but he works and the same catchy like the works and the same catchy like. idea for the people and get up some thing in the way of code amendments for your fellow lawyers and you're all right."

At the last meeting of the society the secretary was appointed to act as a committee of one to conduct an investigation of the disposition made by Tessa L. Kelso of certain funds, alleged to be in her possession, and for which no accounting was ever made by her. These funds were raised by an association, an adjunct of the Historical Society, formed for the purpose of preserving the mission ruins of Southern California. Miss Kelso, having been notified by the secretary that an accounting for the said funds would be in order, replied with a letter worded as follows:

"I am in receipt of a communication from you regarding the status of the Association for the Preservation of Missions. While I do not recognize any official connection between the Historical Society and the Mission Association, as one of a committee appointed to represent the Historical Society at an informal preliminary meeting of a number of clubs and societies regarding the saving of the mission buildings, I report as follows:

He read the proposed measure at the meeting of a campaign club the following day, and it pleased them far better than the insolvency amendments pleased the attorneys. The local newspapers favoring his election wrote columns about what a man could do who originated so timely a law, and each of them felt sure that he would now see the infinite wisdom of their individual hobby, while the opposing press cried that he stooped to peccadillos. In fact, the campaign came to devolve upon a gasoline issue; one faction being known as the Gasoline party and the other as the Anti-Gasoline. The Anti-Gasolineans won, and sent Hon. James Channing to the Senate.

Was she.

After the session and a few months of luxurious travel, Channing returned to his constituency to find the gasoline activities of his constituency to find the gasoline the proposed measure at the meeting to his constituency to find the gasoline the said to his constituency to find the gasoline the said to his constituency to find the gasoline the said to his constituency to find the gasoline that he said to his constituency to find the gasoline the said to his constituency to find the gasoline that he said to his constituency to find the gasoline that he said to his constituency to find the gasoline the topic of his wind the said to

While the chief clerk of the Senate was filing the Gasoline Bill, immediately after its first reading, a man hurried to the telegraph office in the lobby and sent this message:

to the telegraph office in the lobby and sent this message:

"To John Strong, manager Consolidated Gasoline Manufacturing Company, New York: Bill introduced prohibiting gasoline stoves, etcetera. Wire me your instructions." That afternoon the same man received, as a reply:
"Bill must be pulled down. How much will it take? Telegraph."

Still later in the afternon this man called upon Channing at his hotel, presented a letter of introduction from a prominent member of the Senate, and, after some preliminary pleasantries, brought up the matter of the restrictive measure on gasoline. He said, in substance, that he represented parties in interest who wished the bill suppressed, and who were willing to compensate for any trouble or inconvenience caused by its defeat or withdrawal—to all of which Channing expressed decided disapproval. Then the tempter turned threatener, and cited where his powerful influence lay, and stated that Channing need never expect support from those-toward whom he showed no consideration, and that his further political aspirations, whatever they might be, would surely meet with defeat; but still Channing resolutely refused to entertain a compromise, and his visitor left him, saying that he would call again.

It seemed to Channing rather an odd left him, saying that he would call again.

It seemed to Channing rather an odd coincidence that several of the best friends of the bill, among them the Senator, who sent the lobbyist, should come to him the next day, and express their disheclination to vote for it, and even attempt to dissuade him from bringing it up for a second reading.

Mrs. Channing was present in the adjoining parlor during the succeeding visit of the syndicate's agent, and heard the conversation in which Channing was offered $10,000 to desert the bill and aid in "plugging up the hole," and in which he was given twenty-four hours to accede or decline. When the fellow had gone, with no very pleasant parting from Channing, his wife asked him if he intended accepting the proposition made to him, and he said "No!"

What It Does

The Keeley treatment cuts down intemperance. closes the saloon, extinguishes the distill. It makes men of demons, husbands of sots, and honor of dishonor. Dr. Keeley has given to the world life instead of death, hope for despair, safety for danger, happiness for misery. No man has ever given the world more than this. And yet there are men bound in the chains of alcohol who never would think that Dr. Keeley's chloride of gold was meant for them unless some friend should urge it

"But James." she demurred, "Do you think it policy to refuse? Is the bill sure of passing if this man and his friends oppose it, and wouldn't it be better for you to have the money if it isn't to pass?"

"No, Stella; d—n it, no! I shall stand by my colors as long as there's a shred left."

"Oh, all right; only, I wish we could better afford it. Our expenses, you know, if we maintain our standing here, will overbalance your salary—and ten thousand would build such a beautiful little home, just as we've planned it so often. Besides, I can't see that you're'up here for your health,' as they say. But you know best, James," and she looked at him in a way that brought back, all at once, every longing he had ever had for comfort and luxury.

Well, the outcome was that Jim Channing's bank account swelled suddenly to five figures, and the gasoline bill was relegated to a well-filled but obscure pigeon-hole. Now that he had tasted blood, he must have it regularly. For example: He presented an enactment compelling railroads to construct sixfoot instead of four-foot fences along all rights-of-way, and the companies paid liberally to escape building the other two feet of that fence. As for his wife, the higher the fence, the happier was she.

After the session and a few months

nevertheless.

He could never forget that day. Judge Brown and he were conversing when a messenger rushed up and said half a dozen words that seemed to throw the world into night, the blackness of which has never passed away. His wife, the idol of his every ambition, the nucleus of all his ider, was dying. It was the same old stray—a story which newspapers carry in stereotype from day to day. She had none to visit a friend who was confined to her bed; she had attempted to make tea on the friend's gasoline stove; alm—in the time it takes to tell, the remains of the friend were but a few cinders in a pile of ruins, and she, who but a few moments before was a beautiful, vivacious woman, was now a writhing, loathsome scar, dying from pure physical agony.

That's the reason Jim Channing lives alone in a remote corner, and spends his time poring over a scrapbook of telegraph news clippings, and when you inquire about it, says to you, with the monotonous tone, the wide-open eyelids and the dilated pupils that mean so little and tell so much, that it is his record of "Private Victims."

And that's the reason, too, for an epitaph which seems so ludicrous to a stranger, but has a bit of pathos, if the story be known, for it reads: "Stella B., Beloved Wife of, etc., A Victim of Gasoline Legislation."

THE POLICE COURT.

SUNDAY LAW-BREAKERS ANSWER FOR THEIR CRIMES.

The Parrot Case Was too Knotty for Immediate Decision by Jus-tice Morrison-Drunks and Dis-turbers of the Peace Punished.

Monday is usually a very busy day in the Police Court, but yesterday was an exception. There were few Satur-day-night and Sunday law-breakers, consequently the court had a comparavely easy time of it.

The first case of importance that engrossed the court's attention was in regard to the ownership of a certain green Australian parrot of the alleged value of $25. This is the same bird that created such a commotion, as well as much amusement, in court last Saturday by its naive utterances. Mrs. Chapin and Mr. Hendee were both on hand yesterday morning to prove their respective claims to the ownership of the emerald-plumed biped. Mrs. Chapin positively identified Polly as the bird that was stolen from her about March I, after being her property for seven years, and Mr. Hendee tried to show by his books that he purchased the parrot of a boy December 24, 1894. Other witnesses testified for each side, and when the testimony was all. In the court found it so equally balanced that he was unable to decide one way or the other. He therefore took the case under advisement, and meantime appointed himself custodian of the parrot, so that he might converse with the bird and hear from its own lips (?) who is the real owner. Mrs. Chapin said among the parrot's vocabularly were such words and phrases as "Mamle," "Hello! Dick," "Polly wants an apple," day by its naive utterances. Mrs. is the real owner. Mrs. Chapin said among the parrot's vocabularly were such words and phrases as "Mamile," "Hello! Dick," "Polly wants an apple," "potatoes," etc. Polly was too busy yesterday repeating the slang expressions she learned in the menagerie to repeat the chaste words taught her by Mrs. Chapin, if, indeed, she is the same bird Mrs. Chapin lost. Justice Morrison before rendering a decision will endeavor to catch Polly in a talkative mood, and thus satisty himself as to whether she was schooled by Mrs. Chapin or has been under the tutelage, exclusively, of show people. It may be stated in this connection that Polly, when left in the office of the police booking clerk Saturday night, was so bolsterous and used such shocking language, that Judge Bean, the modest and dignified desk sergeant, ordered her incarcerated in the dark cell and had her put on a diet of bread and water. In consequence of this punishment Polly wore a very subdued air yesterday, and had very little to say in court. It remains to be seen whether Justice Morrison's persuasive manners will induce her to talk and tell all she knows. At the afternoon session of the court less than a dozen drunks and hobos occupied the dock. The plain drunks got the usual sentence—$3 or three days. Charles Reed, an express driver, who was both drunk and disorderly, was fined $5 and given the alternative of working it out in the chain gang at $1.

Billy Kidder, charged with interfering with Officer Matuszkiewiz in the discharge of his duty, pleaded not guilty and had his trial set for today at 2 p.m. The same entry was made in the case of Charles Vinson, accused of interfering with Officer Lenhausen. Bail in each case was, fixed at $50 eash or $100 bond, which is very low considering the fact that the maximum penalty for an offense of this kind is $500 fine or five years in the penitentiary. C. D. Fimbres and R. E. Ballestero, arrested by Officer Henderson Saturday night for carrying concealed weapons, were discharged, as it was not proved conclusively that the arrest was made inside the city limits. The court gave the prisoners the benefit of the doubt and they went on their way rejoicing.

The trial of Albert Keyser for selling ilquor over the bar of the Vendome saloon on Sunday, went over till today. James Deavitt pleaded guilty to the charge of disturbing a religious meeting, and was sentenced $5 or five days.

POSTOFFICE ROBBERIES.

Inspector Flint Returns from His Tour of Investigation.

Postoffice Inspector Flint returned yesterday from a trip to various points in the San Joaquin Valley, and San He investigated the case of the robbery of the postoffice in Porterville, Tulare county, which occurred one week ago Saturday night. The thief went to the home of Postmaster P. C. Montgomery, some distance from the postoffice, and, after effecting an entrance to his bedroom, stole his pants, in the pockets of which were the keys to the postoffice. The thief stole away without awaking the postmaster, and, by means of the keys, entered the post-office and took away $538 in stamps and $200 in money.

Another robbery of a different character was brought to the notice of the inspector. It occurred at the postoffice at Frazier, Tulare county. Two boys about 12 years of age effected an entrance and stole $3 in money. They entered the place by taking out the acrews of a door with the aid of a screwdriver, and then removing the door.

The lads were apprehended, after went to the home of Postmaster P.

The lads were apprehended, after which they confessed their guilt. They were soundly flogged, which occurrence closed the incident.

TO DISCUSS CHOLERA.

A Special Meeting of State Health Board This Morning.

In response to suggestions, Dr. J. H. Davisson, president of the State Board of Health, called a meeting of the board to be held this morning. The meeting was summoned by telegraph, and is to be at the office of Dr. J. R. Laine, a member of the board, at No. 920 Sutter treet, San Francisco.

treet, San Francisco.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the possibility of cholera invasion. It will be remembered that the steamer Monowai, which arrived in San Francisco from Australia last Friday, did not stop at Honolulu because of an outbreak of cholera there. It was thought that the outbreak was among passengers who had been brought there not long before by the steamer Belgic. Passengers on the Belgic were also landed at San Francisco, and were scattered from there to various points in the country.

Dr. Davisson thought that under the circumstances little could be accomplished by such a meeting as proposed. Yielding, however, to the expressed wishes of the parties offering the suggestions, he, yesterday, telegraphed a notice summoning a meeting of the board this morning, as above stated. There are seven members of the board. Dr. Remondino of San Diego, one of the members, and Dr. Davisson, it is expected, will not be present. It is thought that there will be present a sufficient number of members from the northern part of the State to furnish a quorum.

MUST OBEY LAW. Notice to Saloon-keepers by Liquo.

Dealers' Association. A petition will be 'presented to the City Council in the near future from saloon-keepers of the city, asking that a certain leniency be shown in regard to the requiring of the Sunday closing

This petition, it is said, is the outcome of a feeling that it is unfair to require the saloons to be closed on Sundays, and at the same time to permit the restaurants and drug stores to do a retail liquor business. This, the saloon-keepers say, entails a heavy loss to them.

Notice was given to the various saloon-keepers by the Liquor-dealers' Association nearly a month ago that they would be expected to comply strictly with the Sunday closing and other saloon laws. If any of them should fall to do so the offender in each case would have to individually suffer the consequences. He must not expect the association to aid him in the difficulty.

The notice asked that it be regarded for the present until a more satisfactory adjustment of the matter could be obtained.

Another Total Eclipse of the Moon. Another Total Eclipse of the Moon.

The people of California, especially those who were fortunate enough to be at the Lowe Observatory on the 10th of March last, have still a vivid remembrance of that beautiful phenomenon, as observed through the great telescope. Curiously enough at about the same hour of the evening on Tuesday next the moon will again pass into the earth's shadow and suffer a total eclipse, which will be visible throughout the American continent and from the western portion of the eastern continent.

This is a return of the total eclipse of August 23, 1877, and it will again return Septem-ber 15, 1913, and, like the one occurring on Tuesday evening, will be visible from Call-fornia, the moon setting before the eclipse

As on the March eclipse, the Lowe Observa-tory will be open free to visitors, enabling them to see how a totally-eclipsed moon looks when brought to within 1000 miles of the earth.

Partial of eclipse begins at 8 o'clock.

Total eclipse begins at 9:06.

Middle of eclipse, 9:57.

End of total eclipse, 10:38.

End of partial eclipse, 11:54.

During totality Frot. Lewis Swift will show visitors the new comet through the big telescope, which cannot be seen in bright moon-light.

CHEMICAL FIRE ENGINE WILL

Fifteen-cent Meals - A Water Strike in Enton's Canyon—Sup pressed Disorder by Swearing.

PASADENA, Sept. 2 .- (Regular Cor respondence.) The regular meeting of the City Council this afternoon was a busy session, and only one member. Trustee Lukens, was absent. The City Clerk read his affidavits of the post-ing of the required notice of the street work to be done on East Colorado street, between Marengo and Little ave-pues. They were declared sufficient, and the board proceeded to pass a res-clution of intention affecting the pro-jected improvement. Next in order was the resolution of intention affecting Calone avenue which is to be graded. jected improvement. Next in order was the resolution of intention affecting Galena avenue, which is to be graded, gurbed and guttered from Illinois street south to Walnut. A request from C. E. Baldwin that the Council tender an invitation to the State Lodge of Good Templars to meet in Pasadena next year, was acted upon favorably, although in the discussion of the matter, Trustees Weetl and Washburn declared that they thought that such an invitation did not come within the province of the board. When, however, it was shown that former councils had been in the habit of extending such invitations, all agreed to the measure. The Auditing and Finance Committee ordered warrants drawn to the amount of $1230.22, for demands against the city, and ordered that $600 be transferred from the general fund to the sewer fund, for the partial payment of bills. It was ordered that in future the lodgers at the expense of the city, in the jail, should be regaled only with 15-cent meals, and, when this weighty matter had been settled, the Trustees proceeded to open bids for the chemical engine. Judge Weed made the statement that all of the objections of taxpayers who had complained to him concerning taxes had been based upon the salaries paid to the city fire department. He intimated that for nine months in the year property-owners were wanting something that they could not get, and for the other three months were grumbling about the taxes they paid for their public conveniences. He did not mention the fact that not one complaint in the last six months has appeared in the public prints regarding the fire department, but that there has hardly been a week to the time that there has hardly been a week to that time that complaints regarding that not one complaint in the last six months has appeared in the public prints regarding the fire department, but that there has hardly been a week in that time that complaints regarding the street department have not been heard from every part of town. Mayor Cox said that the fire department was the pride of the city, even if people did grumble about it. The Times correspondent avers that no complaint has been registered at this office in six months' time against the fire department, and that in recently canvassing some of the heavy taxpayers regarding the estimates, no word of remonstrance was heard about the estimate for the fire department. Judge Weed's experience seems to have been contrary to that of the public generally, but it was, nevertheless, made the basis of laying the matter of the purchase of the chemical engine over until the middle of October. Bids were received as follows: Champion & Babcock Company, double fifty-gallon chemical engine, $2247.60. The same company offered a double sixty-gallon chemical engine for $2267.60. A Holloway double fifty-gallon was offered by the Boston Woven Hose and Rubber Company for $2050. And a sixty-gallon engine for $2050.

Lincoln-avenue property-owners petitioned to have a sewer placed along that street from Orange Grove avenue to Fair Oaks, and their petition was placed on file. H. W. Morse's petition for the erection of a sign across East Colorado street was also filed, but it was the opinion of the Trustees that no more requests of that sort ought to be granted, in view of the objection of the business community to projecting signs. granted, in view of the objection of the business community to projecting signs. A petition from certain property-owners on Bellefontaine street, near Bradford, regarding the herding of some cows and calves in the vicinity, and requesting that the Council abate the nuisance, was referred to the Health Officer for action. The appointment of Josiah Horton as polleeman did not meet with the confirmation of the board. Judge Weed was of the opinion that no more polleeman were needed at present, and suggested that the price, $2.50 a day, was high. It may be pertinent to remark that the street inspectors who work on the extended time of contractors at $2 a day, were not mentioned as a luxury, and the fact that the police business has been lively of late, and that the "force" is taking a vacation did not seem to influence the decision of the Trustees, though it was suggested by one member that Marshal Buchanan should do incre work himself.

ber that Marshal Buchanan should do more work himself.

A petition from property-owners along Oakland avenue, asking that the street be improved from Colorado to California street was filed. The reports of the various city officials were received, and the City Clerk's quarterly report was also submitted.

A discussion of the matter of electric lighting ensued, and Judge Weed said that reports came to him from different elections of the city that the company was not fulfilling its contract of keeping the arc lights burning on darkinghts, and suggested that all such lamps be numbered, and in the itemized bill statement be made of the hours that each lamp had furnished lights. An inspection of the contract made by the company with the city showed that they were required to do so by its terms, and further action was deemed unnecessary.

The paroxysm of the Herald reporter over the arrest and fine of an obstreparous individual by the name of Kowaisky, on the street Saturday night, and the strictures made in the local and editorial columns of that paper upon the action of the court, are wholly unwarranted by the facts. The Herald reporter, is not often seen in the courts, and evidently did not know that it is the custom to inform a prisoner that he may plead guilty or not guilty as he chooses to do, and if he enters the plea of "not guilty as he chooses to do, and if he enters the plead for the man all the privileges accorded in such cases, and the statement made in the Herald that Kowaisky pall the fine without knowing he was pleading guilty is utterly unfounded. He at first pleaded "not guilty," and the Recorder made out the bond, when, on the advice of a reputable attorney present, and the had seen the whole affair from beginning to en the prisoner changed by, and paid the fine.

A south Side Wharf Sure Enough—
Local Happenings.

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 2.—(Regular Correspondence.) The South Side wharf has emerged from the fog, and can atmost been seen now with the naked eye. The contract for its construction has been let to D. P. N. Little, and he has filed with the Town Clerk a petition for special privilege for a franchise, in order that there may be no delay in beginning work. The structure is to be of iron, and will reach 500 feet into the sea from low-tide line. It will be twelve feet above high water, and the water depth at the end will be about twenty feet at the highest. The location is 300 feet south of the foot of Hill street, and a new atreet will be opened up leading direct to the shore end of the pier. The wharf is really all done now, and only needs to be put into place. This, it is calculated, will not consume a month's time. The iron piles will be "pumped down," and will go into place very rapidly. The result of this plunge into the sea will be watched with interest, as the estimated cost of the wharf is but $5000, and if this money builds a successful pier, it will doubtless be a pattern for others here and elsewhere.

The circulation of the Public Library has continued to climb up grade all summer, August seeing the issuance of 2155 volumes, against 2079 for July, and 1627 for August, 1894.

(Outlook.) There is nothing involved or uncertain in the sewer-bond proposition. The $40,000 bonds, if authorized, will build $40,000 worth of sewers. They will not build $100,000 worth. The location of the sewers to be built is definitely shown in the plans already adopted. There will have to be $40,000 worth of sewers before there are more. The sooner the system is inaugurated the better for all public and private interests.

Mme. Kreig-Bosch is to be specially commended, in addition to the credit won by an excellent musical programme rendered at the Arcadia Saturday evening, for living up to the promise in the matter of beginning her programme. Santa Monica is becoming too ultra-fashionable in the way of late gathering to all sorts of public doings. A reform in this direction would meet with general approval. It was begun in a way Saturday night. The numbers on Mme. Kreig-Boschs' programme were heartily appreciated by a critical audience, and encores were numerous and generously responded to. The postoffice was about the only spot in town today where the fact that it was Labor day generally throughout the country made itself manifest to the public. That handy institution observed Sunday hours; but for the rest, business went about as usual in town. There was a good number of visitors in town Sunday, and a very enjoyable concert. The day was pleasant, and there are to be more concerts and no end of pleasant days yet this year.

The attendance at the opening of the public schools today fully justifies the additional teacher who has been added to the faculty since the beginning of the long yacation.

Now for the sewers—a big vote and a full vote and a rousing majority for the bonds. The election will be held at the engine-house, and voters may begin to get in their work at sunrise. The following are the election officers: E. D. Suits and H. X. Goetz, inspactors: H. C. Bagg and S. Jackson, judges; W. S. Chamberlain and G. C. Bochme, clerks: Ward Leavitt and M. H. There was a very large and representative mass—meeting of Santa Monica citizens at the Operahouse tonight, to discuss the sewer proposition, which will be voted on Tuesday. The sentiment in favor of the improvement was unanimous. The friends of the proposition are confident of success. It was truly said that the question was one of vital sanitary importance to Santa Monica truly said that the question was one of vital sanitary importance to Santa Monica truly said that the construction of the new South Santa Monica Trustees held a meeting this evening, and voted special privileges for the construction of the new South Santa Monica wharf. SANTA ANA, Sept. 2.—(Regular Cor-respondence.) Sheriff Nichols will soon have two able-bodied deputies in the field, the sight of which will certainly strike terror to the hearts of evil-doers. The new sleuths are of the celebrated variety of Cuban bloodhound, and, though quite young, have already begun to exercise their predominant olfactory organs for future emergencies.

They roam around the jallyard, with their pendulous and awful ears almost sweeping the ground, while the prisoners gaze through the bars and, no doubt, conclude that captivity is a blessing undisguised when compared with acting the part of pacemaker in a match with those formidable creatures. The Sheriff will soon begin the training of his new deputles preparatory to giving them permanent positions on his staff. This training process will require some time and an unlimited amount of patience, and besides a man to follow the dogs in the pursuit of their game will require another to take the part of the fleeing criminal and distribute tracks for the animals to follow. This, it will be understood, might in some instances involve rather painful experiences should the dogs overtake their game, but the man being chased will soon acquire presence of mind and keep near tail timber.

Trout Streams Stocked.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 2.—(Regular Correspondence.) Bids for furnishing a city water supply and distributing system will be opened tomorrow by the City Council. It is earnestly hoped that a satisfactory bid may be secured. John D. Spreckels, who wants the Mt. Tecarte system accepted, recently arrived from San Francisco, presumably to help along the cause of his water proposition. The Flume people have not had much to say in public. They have silently allowed their water rivals to vinity them in the public prints. Concequently the efforts to tear down a semi-tropic Land and Water Company at Risito was sold at commissioners' sale this morning under a fore-closure in which judgment had been rendered in favor of Henry Pierce of San Francisco for about $35,000.

The actual settlers were not made parties to the suit; that is, it had been dismissed against them, although a blanket mortgage covered all the land ever owned by the company. But the mortgage had been in existence for some time before it was recorded, and many of the settlers booght land without any knowledge of the existence of this claim until some time later, when it was filed for record.

The mortgage is a second mortgage, the one held by the San Francisco Savings Union for $275,000 being a first mortgage on all the property ever owned by the Semi-tropic people.

The proceedings were conducted by Commissioner Samual Rolfa, and among those present and keeping a careful eye on what was done, were Receiver Sheldon for the Semi-tropic Company, and Judge Variel of Los Angeles, who represents the San Francisco Savings Union.

respondence.) A meeting of citizens of the Alessandro irrigation district was held at the Midland schoolhouse in Morespondence.) A meeting of citizens of the Alessandro irrigation district was held at the Midland schoolhouse in Moreno last Saturday evening, at which an organization was perfected to be known as the Alessandro Protective Association, D. E. Myers being elected president. It starts in with a membership of fifty-nine, and it is probable that revery resident in the valley will become a member. The object of the association as stated in the platform resolutions adopted is, "to protect the citizens and land-owners of the district against the collection of any more irrigation taxes for the purpose of paying interest on the district bonds, and in the event of Judge Ross's decision not being sustained, to commence proceedings to establish the illegality of the bonds."

The formation of the district and the issuing and disposal of the bonds, the association believes, was fraudulent, and notwithstanding that confirmation proceedings were had, it is believed the bonds can be knocked out, and this belief is based on the best legal advice obtainable. It is a notorious fact that the district issued bonds in the sum of $765,-000, and the board of directors turned them over to the Bear Valley Company, and in return received absolutely nothing but a paper promise of the right to buy water of that company (according to their own interpretation of the certificates and contract.) and that right was limited by the probabilities in the land of the district, and the paper received for them and called class "B" certificates, is valueless, it is alleged, and always was. It represented a dam and canal that was not built, and water that was not stored. It was something that existed only in the realm of bare possibilities.

The formation of this association is an important epoch in the history of

The complaint states that the plaintiff pald $2889.75 for the property, which was purchased at the earnest solicitation of E. H. Penfield. To enable Mr. Penfield to carry out certain trusts, the plaintiff reconveyed the property; with the promise that the deeds should not be placed on record. The former directors were not so good, With Escondido district it made but little difference whether the Wright act was knocked out or sustained by the Supreme Court, as its people are prepared to meet the bonds and pay the running expenses of the district at all events. Investigation failed to reveal any cessation of labor in any of the downtown marts of trade, and the indifference of the mer hants, extended to the residence and manufacturing portions of the city. No eager multitude awaited the formation and march of the parade, which was given early in the day. The procession med on Temple street at the junction of Spring and Main streets, marching on Spring to Fifth street, east on Fifth to Main, north on Main to First, and from thence to the La Grande Station, where the majority of those taking par in the parade secured passage for Re-

The parade moved promptly at 9 o'clock, preceded by "mounted police," which feature consisted of four policemen mounted on blcycles, followed by a which feature consisted of four policemen mounted on blcycles, followed by a band, and then came the representatives of the Council of Labor in carriages, followed by fourteen members of the Turnverein Germania. The Plumbers' Union, No. 78, turned out to the number of forty-eight, and the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners did very nearly as well with thirty-six representatives. Typographical Union No. 174, mustered members to the number of thirty-four and the Retail Clerks' Protective Association followed with twenty-five representatives. Then came the second band of the procession and immediately following marched the Pastry Cooks' Union, fifty strong. The Tin Sheet and Cornice Workers were next, numbering thirty men, followed by the Painters' and Decorators' Union, which had forty-five men in line.

THE RED FLAG. Last, but not least, marched thirtyone men wearing black shirts, each adorned with a flery red necktie and

That ended the procession. The following-named organizations, which had been scheduled to march, did not appear or take part in the parade, although the evening papers described the affair with these parties as participants:

Cigar-makers' Union, Los Angeles Musical Union, Bakers' and Confectioners' Union, Hotel and Restaurant Employees' Alliance, National Brotherhood of Electric Workers of America, Theatrical Employee's Alliance, American Railway Union, Pasadena Painters and Decorators, Pasadena Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, International Educational Labor Association and the Farmers' Alliance. None of these were in line.

The parade was the only feature of the celebration which took place in the city, the oratorical exercises having been adjourned to Redondo, where Attorney W. T. Williams, F. B. Colver, Burdette Cornell and J. R. Rush delivered speeches they considered appropriate to the occasion. Following the oratorical display came a series of races participated in by the visitors and including such events as a fat man's race, a potato race, a sack race and other diversions.

The Socialistic Labor Union refused to go to Redondo, claiming that the principles of the organization forbade the needless enriching of a railway corporation's coffers, and there was small opportunity to capture a train. Aside from the particulars related, the chief feature of Labor day was the excuse it offered to some people to keep away from labor. AN OPEN-AIR MEETING.

AN OPEN-AIR MEETING.

In the evening a meeting was held at the northwest entrance to the Courthouse grounds, where about two hundred labor-union enthusiasts gathered to hear Burdette Cornell, the boy apostle of labor unionism, discourse on the ills that afflict the body politic, and how to cure them. Mr. Cornell is a boy in appearance only. He speaks with a stentorian voice, and handles his subject in a manner that could only come from years of study and practice.

The speaker first devoted his attention to the financial evils of the nation and advocated the abolishment of private and national banks. Then, in his boyish way, he took up the railroad, packing-house and Standard Oil monopolies, and told how the only remedy for these evils was government ownership and control of transportation facilities.

ship and control of transportation fa-cilities.

Before closing, he expressed his opin-ion about Debs, and tried to delfy that individual.

James R. Armstrong, a local labor agitator, with a jerky voice, in sharp contrast with the smooth delivery of the boy orator, made a few remarks, urging the need of closer unionism of the laboring classes whereby to fight capital.

Edward Fulton presided over the meeting, and at the close took up a collection to defray the expenses of the gathering. The cash realized amounted to $7.65.
